Examples of major long-term care issues may include facility closures, planning for alternatives to institutional care, transition of residents to less restrictive settings, etc.

We are pleased to share that Medicaid move-outs are no longer the top concern of our Agency! We believe this is due to better provider education, support by the provider groups in following state policy, and consistent notification/follow up by the Oregon Ombudsman Agency.

We are also pleased to share that more adult foster homes were visited during this period, and that our agency now routinely participates in provider education seminars, panels and legislatively appointed committees to enhance the quality of care in all levels of care in our state.
