

JUVENILE PAROLE AND PROBATION OFFICER

GENERAL DESCRIPTION OF CLASS

The JUVENILE PAROLE AND PROBATION OFFICER supervises and reports on the conduct of youth offenders (up to age 25) committed to the state's custody by the courts under either parole or probation. Employees assess the youth's needs, develop and coordinate case plans in the community or correctional setting, arrange for and coordinate community services that support the youth's plan, monitor the youth's behavior to make certain he or she follows the provisions of the parole or probation agreement, and enforce court orders.

DISTINGUISHING FEATURES

This is a single classification and not part of a series of classes. Employees give correctional case supervision to youth offenders with a high public safety risk. The work requires professional-level discretionary judgment using knowledge of the principles and skills of correctional reformation and case management.

DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

The duties listed below are characteristic of the type and level of work associated with this classification. Individual positions may do all or some combination of the listed duties or other related duties.

1. Community Based Case Planning

Meet with youth assigned to caseload to establish relationship and support youth for their eventual release from state care and custody. Attend case review while youth is in correctional facility, residential treatment facilities, other out of home placements and work closely with correctional staff and families to develop and plan resources upon release. Research youth's background, family situation, school record and past criminal behavior; formulate and present recommendations to the court, correctional professionals and service providers regarding the suitability of youth offenders for release under parole or probation, and the availability of community resources to support the youth and families if released. Collaborate with other professionals, the youth and his or her family to plan a community-based reformation program that includes needed support services such as educational or job-training, drug or alcohol treatment, and other court ordered actions such as payment of restitution or community volunteer work. Plan release timing, destination, therapeutic and transitional services. Establish with youth rules of conduct, goals, objectives and court orders.

2. Case Management

Monitor youth's adjustment to placement environments and adherence to provisions of parole agreement or probation court orders; meet regularly with youth about reformation and case plan to encourage and monitor the youth's progress. Visit youth at approved placement, schools and places of employment to monitor juvenile's performance. Recommend new or different programs or placements in collaboration with the youth's Multi-Disciplinary Team.

Identify youth with developmental disability(ies); assist youth and family members with applications for appropriate benefit programs; advocate for training and skill enrichment programs for youth;

Investigate alleged parole and probation violations by talking to witnesses, searching for evidence or watching behavior. When the youth violates the parole agreement or probation court orders, arrange for hearing; recommend if the youth remains in the community with sanctions, is returned to the correctional facility or to a more restrictive placement setting. Respond to emergency situations and diffuse aggressive or angry behavior, or take youth into custody.

Model pro-social behavior and advise or coach youth on pro-social behavior; discuss with offenders how such issues as drug or alcohol abuse, and anger management problems may have played roles in their criminal behavior; suggest ways to avoid criminal behavior in the future. Suggest methods for solving personal and adjustment problems; encourage youth to follow the reformation plan and explain consequences of non-compliance. Meet with family members to give progress reports of youth living outside the home. Encourage family members to monitor the youth and support the reformation plan. Inform foster parent of individual youth's case plan and supervision requirements. In collaboration with foster certifiers, give advice to foster parents on supervisory techniques and setting behavioral boundaries.

Initiate contracts for service providers and work with contract specialist to establish contracted service providers. Arrange for or provide bilingual or bicultural services to meet needs of culturally diverse youth and families. Verify that contracted services are provided to youth as billed. Notify youth and other interested parties of court proceedings or appointments; accompany youth to appointments and court; when needed, use proper restraints to transport youth and provide security. Arrange for needed medical care and payment through insurance or other means. Advocate on behalf of crime victims and track that youth pays restitution.

Escort and supervise youth offender absconders returned to Oregon under the Interstate Compact for Juveniles (ICJ); coordinate with the Oregon ICJ Office for interstate air and auto travel arrangements as required. At the direction of the Oregon ICJ office, may be called upon to coordinate with federal agencies and agencies of other states to ensure the safe and efficient return of youth offenders to Oregon. May be called upon to supervise offenders from other states who are on layovers at Oregon airports.

3. Correctional Case Management

Advocate on behalf of youth convicted as adults who are serving their sentences in OYA facilities. Attend Multi-Disciplinary Team meetings and reviews as recommended. Provides input and advocacy to inform decision making related to facility transfers, second look hearings and potentially transition planning.

Offer diversion counseling for youth who demonstrate behavior detrimental to their OYA placement. Remain in contact with youth's family to provide updates on progress or issues. Assist with management and facilitation of visitation or video visits. Provide gas vouchers or transportation for family members to support family engagement and communication with youth in custody. Provide closed custody transition advocacy. In collaboration with his/her supervisor, initiate and develop relationships with local community corrections office or agency by developing and enhancing contacts, providing advocacy and support of youth placement planning, and encouraging and supporting prerelease assignment and/or contact by community corrections parole officer. Consult with community corrections parole officer as requested to provide relevant OYA case history and treatment information. Attend statutorily required "Second-Look" hearings and communicate results to community corrections parole officer.

4. Community Resource Development

Initiate contact and establish relationships with members from community based treatment centers, county juvenile departments, schools, local law enforcement, community outreach programs, vocational and employment agencies, vocational rehabilitation, multi-cultural groups, Department of Human Services or Corrections, or foster care homes. Develop resources that support youths' reformation and help them with transitional adjustments. Work with treatment providers, schools, juvenile departments and other service agencies to coordinate services. Confer with other professionals to adapt treatment programs and gather information to help client. Advocate on behalf of committed youths to courts, at schools or in other community settings.

4. Report Writing

Establish and maintain paper and electronic case files. Compile reports of youth's activities and progress, and enter data into Juvenile Justice Information System (JJIS); prepare and maintain case histories. Write and compile information for Interstate Compact Case documents for youth that move between states. Testify in court proceedings and prepare reports for court submittal or Title IV E reviews. Prepare documents to notify victims and register sex offenders.

5. Miscellaneous

Foster and support collaborative partnerships with local public safety and social service agencies. Obtain and interpret samples of urine or arrange for blood samples to coordinate testing of youth for drugs or alcohol. Present information to community groups, schools and community colleges. Provide or arrange for transportation for youth's home visits or medical appointments.

RELATIONSHIPS WITH OTHERS

The Juvenile Parole and Probation Officer regularly communicates by telephone, in person or in writing with juvenile court workers to collect family or criminal history on court committed youth, to give information and prepare reports for upcoming hearings and proceedings, and to testify. Employees contact school personnel in writing, by telephone or in person to collect and share information regarding the youth attending school; and with police agencies to collect information on alleged illegal activities of committed youth, and to provide information on investigations of reported law violations. They also regularly contact employers and community agencies to develop community resources to support youth, or assist youth in securing training and employment.

Employees regularly meet in-person with youth in their caseload to review their progress and provide direction and advice. They also regularly meet with parents, foster care parents, or youth correctional and residential treatment facilities in-writing, by telephone, or in person to provide and gather information on the youth's progress and adjustment, or to offer suggested techniques for dealing and communicating with the youth.

SUPERVISION RECEIVED

Employees work under general supervision of a supervisor or manager. The supervisor reviews reports to verify the timeliness and content, and to keep informed of caseload status. The employee refers items of case sensitivity to the supervisor. The supervisor and employee meet regularly to review the officer's caseload and solve problems. Work is also guided by state and federal regulations, administrative rules and agency policy.
