Check your benefits

Your pay stub or statement accurately reflects all contributions and deductions for your benefits. Check the first one you get for 2009 to make sure it shows the correct coverage for you and your family. If you see any errors, contact your agency payroll or benefits office as soon as possible.

Looking for Fresh Perspectives

If you're new to a state job, we could use your input. PEBB is designing a Web section just for new employees. Use your insights to help others sort through the benefit selection process. Sign up on the PEBB web site.

Signs of Health

For 2009, PEBB offers agencies a new way to share health and benefits information – “benefit boards” for posting in high-traffic worksites.

PEBB is accepting agency proposals for benefit boards through Jan. 2, 2009. See details, including a photo, at <http://oregon.gov/das/pebb/agencydisplay.shtml>.

Why Weight Watchers®?

Your Benefit Board asked the plans to cover no-cost participation in a weight management program in 2009. The plans contracted with Weight Watchers® for a program that meets the Board criteria.

Why no cost?

In a recent survey, a majority of PEBB members reported they are overweight or obese. This puts them at risk for arthritis, diabetes and heart disease. Your Board wants you to have the support you need to live a healthier, happier life.

Patient Safety Quiz

The state's Patient Safety Commission recently reported on adverse events in Oregon hospitals during 2007. Take the quiz to learn what this means to you.

“Retained object” means

- The patient took the bedpan when he left the hospital.
- The operating team left an object inside the patient.

“Wrong-site procedure” means

- The patient went to the wrong hospital.
- Hospital staff treated the wrong part of the patient's body.

“Medication error” means

- The patient forgot to take her aspirin.
- Someone gave the patient a very wrong dose or type of medicine.

“Adverse event” means – b in all the above.

Oregon hospitals reported 83 adverse events in 2007, including 50 retained objects.

This may be bad news, but it's also good news: they reported.

Almost all Oregon's acute-care hospitals now participate in the commission's voluntary reporting program. Thirty-nine reported adverse events in 2007. They are working to make sure these errors become “never events.”

The commission recently set benchmarks for Oregon hospitals to

- Reduce the number of adverse events, including infections
- Create a culture of safety
- Empower patients to report safety concerns
- Get connected with electronic medical records.
