Q2 Are there other issues the Task Force should consider as priorities for 2015? If so, please describe the issue and include the task and deliverable for the group. This effort will start from where previous gap analyses and recommendations left off, including a comprehensive report and review that took place in 2010 and the current efforts the Domestic Violence Fatality Review Team is making to identify gaps.

| 1 | I am increasingly aware of the impact that the health care system's response has on victims - with the ACA and Oregon's health care reform, there are new opportunities and challenges in delivering effective services to victims. It would be very helpful to have a group of dv and health care experts look at some of those questions to help foster effective collaboration. There are small groups of folks trying to do this, but statewide perspective could be helpful.   | 1/11/2015 11:04 AM |
| 2 | Sick Leave for Domestic Violence Survivors.   | 1/6/2015 10:22 AM  |
| 3 | Leverage action at every level of government. Use the current awareness of DV and resulting momentum to: Increase state agency capacity to promote primary prevention programs and policies at a state, regional, and local level. Increase state legislators' commitment to primary prevention of domestic violence by bringing awareness during the legislative session (and beyond) of the interconnectedness of violence to nearly every issue legislators handle. Within the Executive branch of government, increase commitment to primary prevention of domestic violence, including training to key executive branch personnel. Deliverable: Trainings and information sessions provided to key members of the legislative and executive branch of government, as well as directors of the major state agencies about domestic violence and the interconnectedness of violence. | 1/6/2015 8:02 AM   |

| 1 | I would most like to see us work on the issues identified by the fatality review team, then to see us work on other gaps in the system as identified by gap analysis. I don't think we need to spend a lot of time on gap analysis, because several have already been done over many years, with basically the same gaps identified. I'd like to see us have forward action on items already identified as needs (and some of those gaps are in youth/children response, employment response, firearm response, etc). I have less energy about what issue we start working on than I do that we start forward work on one of the many things we know to be important. thanks so much for these questions! | 1/11/2015 11:07 AM |
