New SAMHSA's Road to Recovery Update

<http://www.recoverymonth.gov/Multimedia/Road-to-Recovery-Updates.aspx>

- Search the New Resources and Science Section of the Web Site. A wealth of resources related to the science of addiction treatment and recovery exists. The field continues to study, evaluate, and release findings related to innovative treatment, recovery services, and the physiological and psychological aspects of substance use disorders. Search the Articles and Studies for audience-specific articles, and find links to Government and Non-Government Resources on the science of addiction and recovery.
- National Alcohol and Drug Addiction Recovery Month, celebrating 20 years of observance in 2009, is an initiative of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration's Center for Substance Abuse Treatment. For more information about Recovery Month, visit <http://www.recoverymonth.gov>.

New SAMHSA: Homelessness Resource Center

- Special Section of the American Journal of Orthopsychiatry: Parenting and Homelessness. The special section on parenting and homelessness fills a gap in research on the challenges of family relationships in the context of homelessness. The articles include practice, policy, and research recommendations to support parents as they stabilize their lives, care for their children, and move out of homelessness. In addition to seven research articles, the special section includes two commentaries by a nurse practitioner who works with families in Baltimore, Maryland, and a mother who was formerly homeless. New Materials from National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA) www.drugabuse.gov
Look what's new at The National Institute on Drug Abuse

- Talk About Prescriptions – In the new video, NIDA scientists Cindy Miner, Ph.D., and Joni Rutter, Ph.D., explain the risks and dangers of abusing painkillers. By watching the video featured on the NIDA for Teens Website <http://www.teens.drugabuse.gov/> Teens can learn about these dangers and some safety tips to keep in mind when they get a prescription from their doctors. In addition to the new painkillers video, NIDA offers teens other resources about the dangers of prescription drug abuse, such as the Sara Bellum Blog, Brain Games, Facts on Drugs, Real Stories, parents & Teachers, Exercise Your Brain, and Mind Over Matter.
- HIV Prevalence at the United States - Mexico Border May Change the HIV Epidemic in Mexico The rapidly changing HIV subepidemic at the border of the United States and Mexico, likely caused by population mobility and the drug and sex trades, may be rapidly affecting the overall HIV epidemic in Mexico. In a recent editorial, NIDA-funded researchers discussed studies of HIV infection at the United States - Mexico border in an effort to better understand factors shaping individual and network-level risks for acquiring HIV. <http://drugabuse.gov/newsroom/09/NS-07.html>
- Denicotinized Cigarettes Affect Nicotine Receptors in Smokers' Brains Nicotine is thought to exert its effects on the brain by binding to receptors in the brain called nicotinic acetylcholine receptors (nAChRs). However, tobacco smoke contains thousands of chemicals besides nicotine, some of which may also bind to the nAChRs or cause molecules normally found in the body to bind to these receptors. To study the effects of denicotinized cigarettes—cigarettes from which nicotine has been removed—on a specific type of nAChR (α4β2* nAChRs), researchers funded in part by NIDA used a brain imaging technique known as positron emission tomography (PET) to visualize these receptors in the brains of smokers during withdrawal and after smoking either low-nicotine or denicotinized cigarettes <http://drugabuse.gov/newsroom/09/NS-07.html>
- Persistent Brain Changes in Response to Cocaine Depend on Expectation of Reward Drug addiction dramatically shifts a person's attention, priorities, and behaviors toward a focus almost entirely on seeking out and taking drugs. An animal study funded by NIDA has identified some of the specific long-term adaptations in the brain's reward system that may contribute to this shift. Using an animal model of addiction, investigators were able to distinguish brain changes in rats trained to self-administer cocaine versus those that were trained to self-administer natural rewards such as food or sucrose for several weeks. The investigators also were able to look at how much the expectation of receiving the drug influenced those brain changes by comparing rats trained to self-administer the drug versus those that received the same amount of cocaine but received it passively by infusion (that is, they could not control their own drug taking by self-administration). <http://drugabuse.gov/newsroom/09/NS-06.html>

- Middle School Interventions Reduce Non-medical Use of Prescription Drugs
The rates of non-medical use of prescription drugs among adolescents and young adults in the United States are alarmingly high. Researchers funded in part by NIDA examined whether several universal drug abuse preventive interventions for middle school-age youth could reduce their future non-medical use of prescription drugs. The interventions, which were administered to both middle school-aged children and their families, were tested in two randomized, controlled studies conducted in the rural Midwest. The first study tested two different family-based interventions, the Preparing for the Drug Free Years (PDFY) program and the Iowa Strengthening Families Program (ISFP), which focus on teaching families about risk and protective factors for substance use. The second study compared the school-based Life Skills Training (LST) intervention program with the Strengthening Family Program for Parents and Youth 10 - 14 (SFP), a revised version of the family-based ISFP, plus the school-based LST programs

News Releases & Media Advisories

- NIH and VA Announce $7 Million Partnership for Substance Abuse Research among Military Personnel, Veterans and their Families Two federal departments have joined forces to create a first-time collaborative funding project to support research on substance abuse and associated problems among U.S. military personnel, veterans and their families. NIDA, in partnership with two other NIH Institutes -- the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAAA) and the National Cancer Institute (NCI) -- are jointly collaborating with the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) on a seven million dollar funding opportunity announcement for research in this area.
<http://drugabuse.gov/newsroom/09/NR7-30.html>
- NIDA Study Shows School-Based Prevention Program Reduces Problem Behaviors in Fifth Graders By Half A study suggests that school-based prevention programs begun in elementary school can significantly reduce problem behaviors in students. Fifth graders who previously participated in a comprehensive interactive school prevention program for one to four years were about half as likely to engage in substance abuse, violent behavior, or sexual activity as those who did not take part in the program. The study, supported by NIDA, appeared in the August 2009 print issue of the American Journal of Public Health.
- NIDA Study Suggests Low-Key Anti-Smoking Ads Are More Likely to Be Remembered than Attention-Grabbing Messages For the first time, preliminary research using brain-imaging technology has shown that low-key and attention-grabbing anti-smoking public service announcements stimulate different patterns of activity in smokers' brains and that smokers are more likely to remember seeing the low-key PSAs. The study, published May 15, 2009 in the journal NeuroImage, was supported by the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA) and the National Cancer Institute, both components of the National Institutes of Health
<http://drugabuse.gov/newsroom/09/NR5-15.html>
- NIDA Study Reveals Widespread Effects of Cocaine on Genome Structure and Function Repeated use of addictive drugs such as cocaine causes long-lasting changes in parts of the brain involved in motivation and reward, among others, yet the precise mechanisms by which these changes are maintained are poorly understood. A new study by scientists supported by the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA), published May 14, 2009 in the journal Neuron, sheds light on this process by providing fundamental new insights into the effects of cocaine on the structure and function of the genome, the complete set of DNA instructions needed to make an organism.

Other News

- CBS College Sports Network Outreach Á Brian Marquis on NIDA's communications team worked with CBS College Sports Network to encourage them to air NIDA's public service announcements (PSAs) about steroid abuse. Four PSAs (in varying lengths) were provided to the network which aired them during both local and national commercial breaks. To date, the spots have aired more than 300 times. CBS College Sports Network is a 24-hour cable network dedicated to college sports and covers over 25 men's and women's sports. The network has more than 30 million subscribers and is available in 80 million homes in markets on cable and satellite systems across the country. View the PSAs ⇒

- NIDA Teams with Taylor Hooton Foundation

NIDA's Brian Marquis also met with Don Hooton, CEO of the Taylor Hooton Foundation, in May to discuss collaboration on distribution of NIDA age-appropriate steroid materials and messages. As a result, Brian was a VIP at the Washington Nationals game on July 22 where Don delivered a Hoot's Chalk Talk assembly to about 35 kids from the Washington, D.C. area. Hoot's Chalk Talk is the name of a family of programs that have been created to raise awareness and provide education on the subject of anabolic steroid and other performance enhancing drugs (PED's) use by the youth of America. It is the Foundation's goal, in conjunction with its partners, to deliver this program at every major high school in America. The Taylor Hooton Foundation was formed in memory of Taylor E. Hooton, a 17-year old high school athlete from Plano, TX. Taylor took his own life on July 15, 2003, as a result of the abuse of anabolic steroids. This Foundation was founded by the parents, family and friends of Taylor after his death when the founders became aware of the magnitude of a growing problem among high school athletes across the country - the illegal use and abuse of anabolic steroids as a performance enhancement drug in addition to other PEDs. For more information on the Foundation and the Hoot's Chalk Talk, visit www.taylorhooton.org.

New Materials from Parents.The Anti-Drug <http://www.theantidrug.com>

Dr. Drew Pinsky - or Dr. Drew, as he is known as host of Celebrity Rehab on VH1 - recently joined the Drug Czar, Office of National Drug Control Policy Director R. Gil Kerlikowske, to answer questions from reporters and bloggers on parenting and teen prescription drug abuse. During the online chat, Dr. Drew and Director Kerlikowske shared their expertise on drug prevention, ways to handle teen pressures, and resources for families struggling with substance abuse. They covered a variety of topics, including, the types of prescription drugs teens commonly abuse, how parents can talk to their kids about drugs, tips for bridging generation and technology gaps, and much more. Read through the chat transcript to learn more from Dr. Drew and Director Kerlikowske.

You can influence your teen's behavior

Despite the peer pressure and media influences that teens face every day, parents are the most important influence when it comes to keeping their kids drug-free. To effectively safeguard your kids from drugs, parents can monitor teens by keeping track of their activities, monitoring their use of technology (including Web site histories, text messages, and call logs) and paying attention to new or changing lifestyle patterns to remain in-the-know about what's going on in their lives. Learn more about safeguarding and monitoring your teen.

What can you do? Follow these tips to help reduce the risk of teen prescription drug abuse:

1. Safeguard all drugs at home. Monitor quantities and control access.
2. Set clear rules for teens about all drug use, including not sharing medicine and always following the medical provider's advice and dosages.
3. Be a good role model by following these same rules with your own medicines.
4. Properly dispose of old or unneeded medicines.
5. Ask friends and family to safeguard their prescription drugs as well.

What parents should know about teen use of prescription, OTC drugs

Prescription and over-the-counter drugs are found in the medicine cabinets of almost every household. Parents can take an active role in preventing the abuse of these drugs by their teens. Looking for FREE materials about teen prescription drug abuse? Check out TheAntiDrug.com's Rx toolkit which includes a color brochure, new report, videos, and more.

Road Safety Reminders As the holiday season rings in more parties and reasons to celebrate, it is important to reinforce the rules of the road with your teen. Too often teens are driving while under the influence of alcohol and drugs. In a comprehensive study on unsafe driving by high school students, 30 percent of seniors reported driving after drinking heavily or using drugs, or riding in a car whose driver had been drinking heavily or using drugs.[1] Remind your teens that driving is a privilege and if they are caught driving under the influence of drugs or alcohol, their driving privileges can be revoked at any time. Get the facts on drugged, drunk, and distracted driving.

- Prepare yourself this holiday season by learning how to safeguard your teen from drug and alcohol use and other risky behaviors:
 - Keep tabs on your teens' whereabouts and have them check in regularly.
 - Set clear rules and reiterate the consequences of breaking those rules.
 - Be firm and follow through on the consequences.
 - Talk to other parents and share stories about what has worked for you and what hasn't.

New Five Moms Discussion Groups <http://www.fivemoms.com/> Join in the Discussion

- We are trying to reach as many parents as possible, and so we are asking you to use the Tell-A-Friend tool at StopMedicineAbuse.org to help us educate parents about the dangerous trend of teens who abuse cough medicine to get high. The three participants who encourage the most people to join our campaign during the month of October will win a new Flip MinoHD Camcorder. For more information, check out the official rules and regulations on our web site.

- Visit StopMedicineAbuse.org to hear directly from Dr. Drew about why he is involved in this campaign and how parents can make a difference in the fight against cough medicine abuse. And stay tuned over the coming months for a series of videos featuring tips and advice on this important issue from Dr. Drew himself.

- Fan Cans” Draw Criticism from Students and Administrators
With college football season just around the corner, a new Bud Light campaign featuring cans with team colors is drawing much criticism, including objections from college students themselves. At Louisiana State University, the campus newspaper ran an editorial denouncing the campaign as a “slick profiting scheme” that could ultimately reflect badly on the university “if a few unruly fans act insensibly”.
- Teen Drinking in Half Blood Prince Calls for an Ounce of Caution
Some parents are questioning the starring role of alcohol in one of the summer’s biggest blockbuster movies, “Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince.” The Harry Potter movie series is the highest grossing film franchise in history with more the $5 billion in gross receipts worldwide.
- When Perception Can Change Reality
A new study suggests that college students might drink less if they thought their friends were doing the same. Alcohol abuse by college students has been reported at colleges throughout Europe, South America, and New Zealand and Australia.
- Alcohol Causes More Than Half of all Deaths in Russia
Alcohol is now killing Russians in the prime of life at an alarming rate. Over a ten-year period, 52% of Russian deaths among people between the ages of 15 to 54 were from alcohol-related causes.
- Educational course on alcohol is a new requirement at Kansas University. After the alcohol-related deaths of two students last year, Kansas University now requires all students under the age of 22 to take a course on the effects of alcohol before enrolling in classes. The free, non-credit online course requires students to answer questions about their alcohol use, but responses are completely confidential. Student government leaders at the university have expressed support for the new course, saying that “education up front is better the education after the fact.”
- New Directions – Ideas to help you take action. National Youth Leadership Program Now Accepting Team Applications. A national youth leadership organization is now accepting applications from teams to participate in a unique professional development program for states and communities. The program “Spotlighting Positive Youth Development”, is run by Building Partnerships for Youth, an organization sponsored by the National 4-H Council and the University of Arizona. For more information: <http://freshstory.org/Spotlighting.pdf>
- Research shows Teen Binge Drinking Damage the Brain - A recent University of Washington study shows that binge drinking during the teen years causes damage to the developing adolescent brain – leading to lasting effects such as impaired judgment and decreased cognitive abilities in adulthood. Children who begin drinking by 7th grade are more likely to have academic problems, use drugs and get into trouble in both middle school and high school. (Ten-year prospective study of public health problems associated with early drinking. “Pediatrics, 111 (5) 949-955, 2003).
- Beer Taxes, Budgets and Healthcare Reform: The Debate Continues - With healthcare reform taking center stage in the U.S., there is increasing debate about alcohol taxes around the country as public officials look for ways to balance budgets and reduce healthcare costs. To find out which U.S. Representatives are sponsoring the BEER Act, got to www.jointogether.org/resources/pdf/hr386-cosponsor.pdf

- Why Emergency Care Costs More for Drunk Drivers - According to researchers at the Injury Prevention Center in Rhode Island, emergency medical care is more problematic and costly for drunk drivers than for non-impaired emergency room patients. The annual cost of alcohol-related crashes in the U.S. totals more than $51 billion. (“The Centers for Disease Control and The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration”).
- Arizona Joins 40 Other States That Allow Guns in Bars - In October this year, a new law went into effect in Arizona that allows concealed weapons permit-holders to bring guns into businesses that serve alcohol – unless business owners post signs that say “No Firearms Allowed.”
- New Alcohol Addictions Facts – The Atlanta Recovery Center has released a new list of alcohol facts that the media isn’t talking about. Here are the top three facts:
 1. More money is spent on alcohol advertising than any other product
 2. 6.6 million children live in homes with at least one alcoholic parent
 3. Almost half of suicides and accidental deaths are caused by alcohol
