The Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute is proud to present the 2008–2009 National Directory of Scholarships, Internships, and Fellowships for Latino students. This year we are celebrating our fourth edition as it remains the only publication in the United States to provide a comprehensive list of scholarships, internships, and fellowships targeting Latino youth.

Hispanics are the largest and the youngest minority group in the United States at 14.4% with projected growth of nearly 40% over the next two decades and 100% by 2040. We have reached a critical time in our history and it is imperative that our future generation of Latino leaders is armed with the necessary education and professional skills to succeed in a competitive job market.

More than 87% of Hispanics do not have a bachelor's degree. This is partly due to economic hardships many students face when preparing to go to college. The scholarships listed in this directory will help many high school and college students afford a higher education and go on to finish their college degree. This inclusive listing not only presents detailed information on national and regional scholarships, but outlines the process for completing a successful application as well.

CHCI's goal is also to provide a source for aspiring young Latinos to gain invaluable experience to help prepare them to become contributing members of the workforce. The internship and fellowship programs listed in the directory all offer significant opportunities to travel, gain hands-on work experience and learn how to make a difference.

There are no limits to what our nation's growing young Latinos can achieve. We hope this guide helps you on your pathway to success!

Sincerely,

Dear Friends,

At State Farm, we believe in the importance of community, the power of education, and the vision of youth. We share a responsibility to bring these three ingredients together for a brighter future. A future that begins today as you prepare to realize your dreams and develop into tomorrow's leaders.

Our commitment to education excellence for all students is a top priority. You are more than our future workforce; you are our neighbors and are tomorrow's community leaders. We believe in you, the value you can add, and we want to help you succeed.

That's why we're particularly proud of our partnership with the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute (CHCI). We appreciate the value that results from building coalitions with organizations that support our vision of building safer, stronger, better-educated communities.

Together, the CHCI and State Farm are offering you this National Directory of Scholarships, Internships, and Fellowships. We believe the directory and other educational materials included in the handbook will help you find the resources that will aide you in achieving your personal goals.

Preparation, planning and research are important steps in reaching your goals. It is our hope these tools will help you reach whatever dreams you hope to pursue.

We look forward to hearing about your many successes.

About CHCI

Mission: The Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute (CHCI), the nation's premier Hispanic leadership development and educational organization, seeks to develop the next generation of Latino leaders. Providing leadership development programs and educational services, CHCI promotes the growth of Latino youth as effective professionals and strong leaders.

A nonprofit, nonpartisan 501(c)(3) organization, CHCI's vision is an educated and civic-minded Latino community, whose members participate in local, state and federal policy decisions.

History

In 1977, five Members of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus (CHC) held a small dinner to benefit Latino youth. One year later, three of those Members — Congressman Edward Roybal, Congressman E. “Kika” de la Garza and Congressman Baltasar Corrada — went on to sign the articles of incorporation to establish the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute, Inc.

True to their vision, CHCI remains a separate, nonpartisan, educational organization, whose programs open doors for young Latinos and enable them to participate hands-on in the American policy-making process.

Programs

Scholarships

Scholarships are need-based and awarded to Latino students demonstrating a commitment to improving the political, economic and social well being of all Latinos. First year undergraduate awardees will receive a free DELL notebook computer and Microsoft software package.

Internships

CHCI interns are placed in congressional offices on Capitol Hill to learn firsthand about our nation's legislative process. They gain professional work experience, leadership development opportunities and an unparalleled social network.

Public Policy Fellowships

CHCI's Public Policy Fellowship Program provides young Latinos with an unparalleled hands-on experience in policy-related jobs in the nation's capital. It combines professional experience, leadership development workshops and trainings, exclusive meetings with elected and appointed officials, policy briefings and a community service project.

Graduate & Young Professional Fellowship

The Graduate & Young Professional Fellowship in Washington, D.C. provides policy experience and leadership development in the areas of health, housing, law and international affairs. The international affairs fellowship includes three months abroad in Mexico or Spain (May-July, 2009)

Online Services

CHCI's publications and online services can be found at www.chci.org. Our web site serves as a clearinghouse of timely and relevant information about the Institute's services, programs and events. The site serves over 500,000 high school students, college students, parents, educators, alumni and professionals each year.

- » All applications for CHCI programs are available online
- » Tips for parents (available in Spanish and English) on planning their child's education and understanding financial aid
- » Listings of the top 25 colleges and top 10 law schools and business schools for Latinos
- » News releases and updates on CHCI programs, events, students, alumni and partnerships

Events

CHCI's Annual Public Policy Conference and Gala

Each fall, Hispanic leaders from across the country convene in our nation's capital for CHCI's Hispanic Heritage Month activities. Event participants have the opportunity to join these luminaries at the most prestigious annual gatherings of Latinos in Washington, D.C.

The events' proceeds account for the main source of funding and sustainability of CHCI's leadership development and educational programs.

Annual Gala

What began in 1977 as a small dinner is today a central event of Hispanic Heritage Month in the nation's capital. More than 2,300 guests join each year in celebration, including Members of Congress, entertainers, industry leaders, and community activists. CHCI has been joined by President Bill Clinton, Vice President Al Gore, Senator Hillary Rodham Clinton, Senator John McCain, Spain's Crown Prince of Asturias, Philippe de Borbón, Jimmy Smits, Ricky Martin, Carlos Santana, Gloria Estefan, Eva Longoria, Wilmer Valderrama, Geraldo Rivera, Rita Moreno, Tito Puente, among others in support of Latino youth.

Public Policy Conference

Since 1980, CHCI has assembled Latino leaders and scholars to participate in timely discussions of the most significant issues affecting the Latino community. Expert panels delve into issues such as education, immigration, housing, health, civil rights, banking and finance, international relations and small business. Additionally, conference participants and panelists have the opportunity to highlight programs and initiatives that address community needs.

Reyes of Comedy Night

CHCI's popular Reyes of Comedy Night features established and rising performers from across the United States, rousing laughter and support for youth. Comedians draw from their diverse experiences and backgrounds to present a comedic portrait of Latino life in the U.S.

Fiesta De Golf Tournament

Every May, avid golf players from across the nation join CHCI for its Annual Fiesta de Golf Tournament held in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area. This event provides an opportunity for Hispanic and corporate leaders to interact socially while raising money for a worthy cause. The tournament proceeds benefit Latino youth through CHCI's leadership development programs.

Regional Events

Throughout the year, CHCI hosts several fundraisers in different regions around the country. These events incorporate a student outreach and a fundraising component. The regional events strengthen alliances with current supporters, expand fundraising and increase the national visibility of CHCI's programs and services.

Our Vision

Our vision is to build safer, stronger, better-educated communities. When communities prosper, we all do.

Our Community Involvement

State Farm's agency team is unique in the industry. State Farm agents do not just deliver on the promise of quality products and services; they develop one-on-one relationships with our customers — and their communities. Those relationships are at the heart of everything we do at State Farm.

We support local programs and organizations that help us to build safer, stronger, better-educated communities. Some of these organizations include:

- » Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute, Inc. (CHCI)
- » Cuban American National Council (CNC)
- » MANA, A National Latina Organization
- » National Association of Latino Elected and Appointed Officials Education Fund (NALEO) - NELI Signature program
- » National Hispanic Corporate Council (NHCC)
- » National Hispana Leadership Institute (NHLI)
- » United States Hispanic Leadership Institute (USHLI)
- » Hispanic Association on Corporate Responsibility (HACR)
- » American Red Cross
- » NeighborWorks® America
- » Youth Service America
- » Partners for Child Passenger Safety with Children's Hospital of Philadelphia

Through the Community Reinvestment Act \(CRA\), State Farm Bank®, F.S.B. is committed to serving the credit needs of the communities in which it does business. State Farm Bank and State Farm Insurance® are proactive in meeting community needs by participating in government and community development projects and programs to improve the economic stability of all our communities, thereby enabling them to grow and prosper.

The Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) was created to encourage financial institutions to meet the credit and banking needs of entire communities — including low and moderate income (LMI) areas and individuals consistent with safe and sound banking operations. State Farm Bank has consistently met or exceeded the requirements of the Community Reinvestment Act. The CRA provides a framework for banks and community organizations to work together to meet these needs. According to the CRA regulation, community development includes:

- » Affordable housing (including multi-family rental housing) for LMI individuals,
- » Community services targeted to LMI individuals,
- » Activities that promote economic development by financing small businesses or small farms, and
- » Activities that revitalize or stabilize LMI geographic areas.

Career Opportunities at State Farm

And, as a leader in our industry, we know recruiting and retaining people with diverse experiences and backgrounds helps us develop broader perspectives, make better and more efficient business decisions, and build deeper relationships with our customers and communities. That's why we're honored to be named by several organizations and publications—including Latina Style magazine — as one of the 50 Best Companies for Latinas to work for.

“Like a good neighbor” is not just how we treat our customers; it's how we participate in the communities within which we live and work and it's how we treat our employees with the opportunities and programs we offer.”

State Farm's deep commitment to good citizenship will not change. We are committed to helping raise the levels of achievement of our nation's teachers and students, to making our homes and highways safe, and to building strong communities.

The way we see it, community involvement is both a business and a social responsibility. Strong and vibrant communities can only remain that way when people from many sectors work together to improve the quality of life for all stakeholders.

American Chemical Society-Scholars Program

The American Chemical Society sponsors a scholarship program designed to encourage Hispanic, African-American, and American Indian students to pursue undergraduate college degrees in the chemical sciences and chemical technology. The goal of the scholarship program is to aid in building an awareness of the value and rewards associated with careers in science and to assist students in acquiring the skills and credentials needed for success in these areas. The scholarships are awarded on the basis of merit and financial need to high school seniors planning a science preparatory program of study, and college students who are currently freshmen, sophomores, or juniors who are committed to the study of chemistry, biochemistry, chemical engineering, or other chemically related fields such as environmental science, materials science, or toxicology and are interested in pursuing careers in one of these fields. Students interested in two-year chemical technology programs and careers in this field are also eligible. Students must have strong academic records and show an interest in, and potential for, careers in the chemical sciences. The amount of each individual award depends upon the availability of funding, the number of scholarships awarded, and evidence of financial need. Scholarships of up to $3,000 are awarded per year and are renewable.

New Jersey Mental Health Institute (NJMHI)-Hispanic Higher Education Scholarship Program

In 2002, the New Jersey Mental Health Institute announced efforts to address the nationwide lack of access to and quality of mental health services for Hispanics by providing scholarship awards to bilingual and bicultural Hispanics through the organization's new Hispanic Higher Education Scholarship Fund. The scholarship fund is specifically targeted to undergraduate college students of Hispanic background who are bilingual and interested in pursuing a Master's degree in Social Work from a New Jersey university. Recipients are announced during NJMHI's annual conference traditionally held in May. The number and quantity of scholarship awards depends on the contributions raised through fundraising activities.

Academy for Educational Development (AED)

The internship program at the Academy for Educational Development was established to enhance AED's ability to attract students of academic excellence as potential full-time employees and aid in the development of a multicultural workforce by focusing on attracting candidates from historically diverse institutions of higher learning. Undergraduate and graduate student interns are given the opportunity to acquire an insight into the types of programming that exists within an organization focused on global education and communication technology. They also gain substantive work experience and develop a realistic understanding of the education and experience required at different levels of responsibility within AED and similar organizations. Interns are involved in a variety of activities such as research and writing, coordination of itineraries and meeting schedules for consultants, visitors, and students; and proposal preparation and production. AED offers paid internships, which provide the student with a salary commensurate with experience and academic history, and non-paid internships, which provide the student with academic course credit or experience. Internship applications and resumes are accepted on an on-going basis.

Georgetown University-Public Affairs Seminar: Internship Program

Georgetown's ten-week summer Internship Program enables students to study and participate in the workings of the governmental process. The purpose of the seminar is to examine the representational and legislative functions of the U.S. Congress. The seminar sessions focus on the workings of Congress and the interrelations among Congress, executive agencies, the courts, interest groups, and political organizations. Students attend classes at night and earn 6 credit hours of undergraduate work. During the day, students are required to work 35 hours a week at their internship site. Students are responsible for securing their own internship placements, but the program director and the Special Programs staff are available to help students identify opportunities and determine how to apply for various internships. Possible placements include Capitol Hill offices, think tanks, and national media organizations. Positions may be paid or non-paid. Tuition for the program is $3,700, plus $1,750 for housing. However, scholarships are available. Applicants must be undergraduate students.

HACU National Internship Program (HNIP)

As background, the HACU National Internship Program (HNIP) works with universities, federal agencies and corporations to recruit well-qualified and motivated students for paid internships during the spring, summer, and fall semesters. These ten- and fifteen-week internship programs allow college students to experience the diversity of careers that exist in the federal and corporate sectors, and provide a quality professional work experience that allows students to make more educated career choices. HACU matches each student's skills and background with the needs of the placements. The result is an internship assignment that directly relates to the student's career goals and allows the placement to further their mission. Because of this opportunity, many of these internships have led to permanent job opportunities for students.

House Committee on Homeland Security Internship Program

Chairman Bennie G. Thompson and the Democratic Staff of the Committee on Homeland Security are pleased to announce internship vacancies for summer 2008. Internships are open to currently enrolled law students, undergraduates, as well as recent graduates, interested in pursuing a career in public service and with a strong interest in homeland security issues and first-hand work experience on Capitol Hill.

Since the Committee's inception, we have had the opportunity to welcome and work with interns from a variety of academic institutions and backgrounds. Aside from handling administrative responsibilities such as covering telephones and answering correspondence, interns support committee staff with their issue portfolios in homeland security. These responsibilities include, but are not limited to, assisting with research, attending hearings, compiling briefing materials and talking points, and archiving committee documents and summarizing reports on various national security issues.

We are looking for individuals with strong academic backgrounds and interest in homeland security issues. A monthly stipend may be available, depending on an applicant's circumstances and qualifications. The duration of an internship can be up to 120 days long. Interns are expected to devote at least 20 hours a week to the Committee. Students interested in applying for a Summer 2008 position should submit a cover letter, resume, writing sample (legal analysis preferred for law students) and three references. Please submit all application to Ms. Nicole Johnson with the following subject heading: Summer Internship Program.

Puerto Rico Federal Affairs Administration (PRFAA)- Internship Program

PRFAA serves as the Office of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico in Washington, DC. Its mission is to advance the interests, priorities, and goals of the Commonwealth, its people, and the growing Puerto Rican population across the U.S. The Internship Program seeks to encourage students to consider careers in government service, to provide them with valuable hands-on work experience, and to increase their knowledge of relevant and timely issues affecting Puerto Rico. Interns' duties will vary depending on which division they are assigned to work with. Educational and social activities scheduled throughout the semester will complement the intern's work experience. PRFAA offers summer, fall, and spring term internships. The number of interns accepted will depend on the qualifications of the candidates, available resources, and PRFAA's needs at the time. Most internships will be unpaid, but students may have the opportunity to receive college credit. In limited situations, PRFAA may consider providing a small stipend to the intern. Applicants must be undergraduate or graduate students in any field of study, must possess excellent oral and written communication skills in both Spanish and English, and must have first-rate research skills.

Smithsonian Center for Latino Initiatives (SCLI)-Interpreting Latino Cultures: Research and Museums

The Smithsonian Center for Latino Initiatives and the Inter-University Program for Latino Research (IUPLR) offer an annual seminar "Interpreting Latino Cultures: Research and Museums." This hands-on training program in methods of researching and interpreting museum and archival collections features faculty scholars from the Smithsonian and outside. The program takes place on the last two weeks in June at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, DC. The seminar challenges students to develop strong research skills, while exploring issues of interpretation and representation of cultural materials and traditions in museums. Practicum in conducting object-based research and in accessing and using the collections of the Smithsonian, the National Archives, and the Library of Congress are key components of the program. The program also offers students an opportunity to forge relationships with a community of scholars, curators, and archivists often unavailable in their home institutions.

William Randolph Hearst Endowed Fellowship for Minority Students

The Nonprofit Sector Research Fund, a grant making program of the Aspen Institute in Washington, DC, offers the William Randolph Hearst Endowed Fellowship three times annually. The fellowship, which is based on academic excellence and need, is open to both undergraduate and graduate students who are members of minority groups. The Hearst Fellow serves as an intern with the Fund. Through this program, the Fund seeks to introduce a diverse group of students to issues relating to philanthropy, volunteerism, and nonprofit organizations. Recipients may arrange with their colleges or universities to receive academic credit for this experience.

The Nonprofit Sector Research Fund was established in 1991 to expand understanding of nonprofit activities, including philanthropy and its underlying values, by making grants to support research undertaken by scholars and nonprofit practitioners.

Activities:

In his or her internship, the Hearst Fellow undertakes general research and program support for the Fund's grant making and outreach efforts.

Requirements:

The ideal candidate for this fellowship is a highly motivated continuing graduate or undergraduate student from an underrepresented community. She or he should have an excellent academic record and also have the following:

1. Outstanding research skills;
2. A background in the social sciences or humanities;
3. Excellent writing and communication skills;
4. Demonstrated financial need; and
5. American citizenship.

The student must be able to intern for 10–15 weeks at the Washington, DC, office of the Aspen Institute. We generally expect that Fall and Spring internships will be part-time (10–20 hours per week) and Summer internships will be full-time. All travel and housing costs must be covered by the student.

Fellowship Stipend:

A fellowship grant of between $2,500 and $5,000 will be awarded, depending on the recipient's educational level, financial need, and time commitment.

Application Procedure:

There is no application form for this fellowship. Please send: 1) a letter of interest (include information about dates of availability for the fellowship); 2) a resume; 3) a transcript; 4) a letter from the appropriate university financial aid officer certifying demonstrated financial need; and 5) two letters of reference to:

American Political Science Association (APSA)-Ralph Bunche Summer Institute

The Ralph Bunche Summer Institute (RBSI) is a five-week, academically intensive summer program designed to stimulate the graduate school experience, provide mentoring, and expand academic opportunities for Latino, African American, and Native American students. For over a decade, the RBSI has helped talented minority students excel and go on to graduate school, many with full fellowships and teaching assistantships. RBSI is designed to introduce minority college juniors to the world of graduate study and encourage application to Ph.D. programs in political science. The Institute includes two transferable credit courses, one in quantitative analysis and the other on race and American politics. Guest lecturers and recruiters from Ph.D. programs visit with students, and the Kaplan Educational Center assists in preparation for taking the Graduate Record Examination (GRE). The Institute is held at Duke University in North Carolina. The Institute provides full support of tuition, transportation, room and board, books, and instructional materials. Participants also receive a stipend of $200 a week.

Catholic Campaign for Human Development (CCHD)-Diocesan Internship

The Catholic Campaign for Human Development (CCHD) is the domestic anti-poverty, social justice program of the U.S. Catholic Bishops. Its mission is to address the root causes of poverty in America through promotion and support of community-controlled, self-help organizations and through transformative education. CCHD provides paid internships throughout the year for young Catholic leaders to gain experience working with and on behalf of the poor. The CCHD internship placement program combines practical work in carrying out the mandate of CCHD at the local level, opportunities to develop relationships with community leaders, reflection on Catholic social teaching, as well as opportunities for sharing the experience with other CCHD interns. The internship is open to young Catholics between the ages of 18 and 30 who have leadership experience, community service experience, and effective writing/communication skills. Positions are available at the CCHD diocesan offices in several cities across the U.S.

Center for California Studies- Sacramento Semester Program

The Sacramento Semester Program is an outstanding undergraduate internship program in the California State University System (CSUS). Created and administered by the CSUS Government Department, the program places up to 30 students in state government, advocacy, news media, and related offices. Students come from all 22 CSU campuses, as well as from the University of California, and other public and private colleges and universities. Students receive six semester credits for working 25 hours per week in the offices of state legislators, legislative committees, the governor, executive branch agencies, political associations, advocacy organizations, or the news media. The students also attend weekly seminars conducted by CSUS faculty and earn additional six semester credits upon completion of the seminars. Financial aid is available to help cover costs of relocating to Sacramento for the program.

Center for Third World Organizing-Movement Activist Apprenticeship Program

Since 1985, the Movement Activist Apprenticeship Program (MAAP) is an intensive seven-week, full-time field-based internship that has produced over 300 organizers of color that have been working in the social and economic justice movement. MAAP is for movement activists of color committed to learning the theory and practice of building social justice movements through community and labor organizing. Interns are placed at one of several partner organizations throughout the U.S. and work full-time under close supervision of an organizing campaign at a community organization or labor union. MAAP interns receive a $200 weekly stipend for six weeks in the field. All housing, health care, and local transportation expenses are covered. At the conclusion of the program, MAAP connects graduates into promising jobs with progressive community and labor organizations. Qualified applicants need only be people of color, be at least 18 years of age, show an interest in learning new skills and ideas, and display a commitment to building a movement for racial justice.

Democracy Matters-Campus Intern Program

Democracy Matters, a non-partisan organization of students and professors working on campuses across the country to educate people about the role of money in politics and its impact on democracy, offers students the opportunity to organize on their campus through its Campus Intern Program. As Campus Coordinators, interns build coalitions of student activists on their campus, organize teach-ins on money in politics, train college students to run workshops in high schools, coordinate with other colleges in sponsoring reform legislation, lobby and educate elected officials about campaign finance reform, and run petition drives and door-to-door canvasses to educate students on the issue of money in politics. Applicants should have a commitment to social change and some organizing experience. No expertise in campaign finance reform is required. Campus Coordinators receive a stipend of $750 per semester. Additional funding is available for campus activities. In some cases, students can arrange with individual professors to get service learning or course credit for their work.

Farm Labor Organizing Committee (FLOC)

Every summer, the Farm Labor Organizing Committee, a member of the AFL-CIO, offers at least 10 dynamic men and women interested in having the experience of a lifetime the opportunity to organize in the fields of Ohio and North Carolina. After an intensive training process, interns are paired with an experienced worker-organizer and assigned to about six farm labor camps (which vary in size from 10 workers to several hundred) to serve as FLOC's link to its members and prospective members in these camps. In Ohio, interns make sure FLOC workers are treated with respect and dignity, and assist in the process of contract negotiation. In North Carolina, interns help FLOC members build relationships with non-unionized workers in a severely repressive work environment, and some times help organize solidarity protests and other actions. Applicants must be at least 18 years of age, must at least have intermediate oral Spanish, and must have excellent people skills and be very well organized. Internships are not paid, but interns receive housing and meals.

Human Rights Watch

The Human Rights Watch, the largest and most influential U.S.-based organization investigating and seeking to promote human rights worldwide, offers academic semester and summer internships for undergraduate and graduate students in its New York, Washington, DC, and Los Angeles offices. Graduate interns monitor human rights developments in various countries, draft reports on human rights conditions, and engage in advocacy efforts aimed at curtailing human rights violations. Undergraduate internships are primarily administrative and clerical in nature, but other projects can be assigned as they arise and match the students' interests and abilities, including research, drafting documents, translating, and helping researchers prepare for missions. Internships are generally unpaid, although work-study funds are available. Academic credit can usually be arranged, as HRW internships offer direct exposure to the workings of an international human rights organization, close supervision by the HRW staff, interaction with other U.S. and international organizations and foreign and domestic government officials, and opportunities to attend lectures and special events relating to human rights.

Mexican American Legislative Foundation, Inc.-Moreno/Rangel Legislative Leadership Program

The Mexican American Legislative Foundation, Inc. is a non-profit, non-partisan corporation committed to fostering the development of leadership skills among the Latino youth of Texas. The Foundation accomplishes this goal by sponsoring the Moreno/Rangel Legislative Leadership Program and encouraging the involvement of young Latinos in the political process. Providing an environment for the advancement of future leaders, the program offers undergraduate and graduate students the opportunity to gain first hand experience in the functions and operations of the Texas House of Representatives. Students will not only learn how state government interacts with the public, but they will also become better equipped to serve the communities they represent.

Princeton Summer Undergraduate Research Experience (PSURE)

Princeton's Graduate School offers a nine-week summer research experience for up to 20 American ethnic minority students from groups traditionally underrepresented in graduate education and on the faculties of American colleges and universities. The purpose of the program is to motivate and prepare students of color to make competitive applications to research doctoral programs, with a view to completing the Ph.D. and then going on to teach and do creative research. Each student accepted for the PSURE is placed with a Princeton faculty member to serve as a research assistant, and thereby become acquainted with the kind of work associated with doctoral study. Research projects will require a full-time commitment (at least 40 hours per week). Also, the Graduate School offers complementary weekly sessions about applying to graduate schools and for financial aid and about graduate student life in particular and academic life in general. Students receive a stipend of $3,750, an allowance of up to $500 for travel, and on-campus housing. Applicants must be full-time students in good standing at their home institution (at least a 3.5 GPA preferred), who are currently enrolled as sophomores or juniors and are members of groups which are historically underrepresented in graduate education.

Puerto Rican Legal Defense and Education Fund (PRLDEF)-Lawbound Summer Academy

Latino and Latina college undergrads interested in law have the unique opportunity to get mentoring and training from the nation's top legal professionals in New York City. The Puerto Rican Legal Defense and Education Fund (PRLDEF)'s 2008 LAWbound © summer academy gives college freshmen and sophomores the chance to talk to Latino attorneys at some of the country's leading civil rights organizations and law firms, and to discuss legal issues with Latino judges in their chambers.

LAWbound's academic program gives students the tools they need to get on the right path to law school. Professors, guest speakers and professionals explain legal methods and processes, and possible career paths for law school graduates. Several field trips throughout the week-long course allow students to step into Manhattan's legal world and visit city courtrooms, law offices, and private firms. The program also provides academic counseling and mentoring, and allows students to establish relationships and ask questions in informal, relaxed, and social settings

PRLDEF invites Latino and Latina college students who will be sophomores or juniors in the fall and are interested in pursuing legal careers to apply for PRLDEF's 2008 LAWbound© summer academy.

University of California, Berkeley- Public Policy and International Affairs (PPIA) Summer Institute

The UCPPIA Summer Institute helps prepare future leaders who possess a commitment to public service and, in particular, to addressing policy issues most affecting historically underserved communities and people of color. UCPPIA is open to all undergraduate majors and students (college juniors) interested in pursuing careers in public service through the attainment of a Master's degree. The Summer Institute offers participants a rigorous seven-week summer program of coursework designed to improve the participants' analytical and quantitative skills. Additionally, the Institute includes a variety of activities intended to give participants a comprehensive knowledge of the opportunities for professional careers in public service. Each year the program admits approximately 30 undergraduates from across the nation to study at Berkeley. Students who successfully complete training at the Summer Institute are designated as UCPIIA Fellows and receive a Graduate Fellowship for a Master's degree either in public policy or international affairs, if accepted into a participating graduate school. Students selected for the Institute will receive a $1,000 stipend, assistance with travel expenses, university housing with a meal plan, books and course supplies, and a GRE preparation course.

University of Michigan Population Fellows Programs-Hispanic-Serving Institution (HSI) Graduate Internships

The Population Fellows Programs, administered by the University of Michigan School of Public Health and funded by the United States Agency for International Development and other donors, were established to train the next generation of leaders in international population assistance. The Hispanic-Serving Institution (HSI) Graduate Internships were created to help bridge the skills and competencies gained during completion of a graduate degree at an HSI to those required for a Population or Population Environment Fellowship. Each internship, which is individually designed to build on an intern's existing skills and experiences, includes a professional work experience and other training in population and family planning. The professional internship consists of a three- to four-month agency assignment. Only students who have recently completed a graduate degree from an HSI, have a demonstrated commitment to family planning/reproductive health or population-environment, and possess the ability and desire to work in a developing country are eligible to apply. Graduate interns receive a stipend, health insurance, and necessary travel and relocation expenses.

University of Michigan Population Fellows Programs- Hispanic-Serving Institution (HSI) Undergraduate Summer Internships

The Population Fellows Programs, administered by the University of Michigan School of Public Health and funded by the United States Agency for International Development and other donors, were established to train the next generation of leaders in international population assistance. The goal of the Hispanic-Serving Institution (HSI) Undergraduate Summer Internships is to provide a mentored, professional learning experience that can help pave the way for students to apply for a graduate internship and ultimately a Population or Population Environment Fellowship, should they decide to pursue a career in the field. The paid summer internships are offered in U.S.-based organizations that work on population, family planning, reproductive health, and population-environment issues of the developing world. In addition to a monthly stipend, interns also receive housing and roundtrip travel. Internships are available both domestically and internationally. Applicants must be juniors or seniors at an HSI, and must have demonstrated academic excellence and an interest in international issues and public health.

University of Michigan, School of Public Health-Summer Enrichment Program for Minority Undergraduates

The Summer Enrichment Program for Minority Undergraduates seeks to encourage minority students to identify health management as an attractive career option by familiarizing them with the field through a structured summer experience. The ultimate goal of the program is to increase minority participation in a career area in which minorities have been underrepresented. Interns work in a hospital or other health care organization in the Detroit/Ann Arbor area. Undergraduate students entering their junior or senior year of study are eligible to apply. Latino, African American, and Native American students are especially encouraged to apply. Interns receive a $3,000 stipend for the eight-week program.

American Sociological Association (ASA)-Minority Fellowship Program

Through its Minority Fellowship Program (MFP), the American Sociological Association (ASA) supports the development and training of minority sociologists in mental health. Funded by a grant from the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH), the Fellowship Program seeks to attract talented minority students interested in mental health issues and to facilitate their placement, work, and success in graduate programs throughout the U.S. Applicants can be new or continuing graduate students. However, the MFP is primarily designed for minority students entering a doctoral program in sociology (with an emphasis on mental health) for the first time or for those who are in the early stages of their graduate programs. Fellows receive an annual stipend of $16,500, plus payment of their tuition. Funding may be extended for up to three years. In addition, the program provides professional development training for the fellows in conjunction with the ASA's Annual Meeting. Summer research internships are used to place Fellows in projects at sites with major, ongoing studies in mental health.

Department of Health & Human Services (HHS) National Head Start Fellowship Program

Do you have a desire to advance your professional life but are not quite sure how? Have you reached a plateau professionally and are not sure how to overcome it? Are you yearning to move outside the box but don't know what's beyond it?

A year in Washington, DC, as a National Head Start Fellow may be an option for you. One of the best opportunities in early childhood education is the National Head Start Fellowship program. This program helps to bring a local perspective to the national office and develops the leadership skills of seasoned and emerging leaders from the field.

For the past 10 years, between 8 and 10 early childhood education and human services professionals from around the country have lived in the Washington area as Fellows while working at the Office of Head Start. While in Washington, they serve as full-time paid special assistants to senior managers at the Office of Head Start by writing position papers, reviewing research findings and proposed legislation, chairing meetings, assisting with policy analysis and participating in policy making discussions.

Professional development is a component of the Fellowship. Fellows study leadership under the guidance of Head Start senior managers and are mentored by professionals in the field. They also visit government and non-government agencies to gain an understanding of policy and advocacy at the national level. Many Head Start Fellows return to their communities with their new skills and knowledge to enhance quality services for children and families.

Presidential Management Intern (PMI) Program

For the past 25 years, the Presidential Management Intern (PMI) Program has been attracting outstanding Master's and doctoral-level students to the federal service. It provides students with an opportunity to apply the knowledge they acquired from graduate study. As a PMI, participants' assignments may involve domestic or international issues, technology, science, criminal justice, health, financial management, and many other fields in support of public service programs. Through the two-year internship program, graduate students are appointed to federal positions as PMIs. After completing the program, interns have the opportunity to obtain a permanent federal civil service position. Applicants must be nominated by their institutions.

Service Employees International Union (SEIU)/Marcia McGill Research Fellowship

In memory of staff economist Marcia McGill, the Service Employees International Union sponsors a one-year fellowship at the Economic Policy Institute (EPI) to provide advanced graduate students with experience in policy-relevant empirical research and assist them in developing their own research/dissertation topic. The fellow will assist EPI economists in empirical research, providing an opportunity to develop and use statistical and methodological capabilities. The fellow will also develop research/dissertation ideas and explore databases at EPI, and will be encouraged to attend seminars, hearings and conferences in the Washington, DC area. SEIU will provide the fellow with the opportunity to learn about the role of labor unions in the policy-making process. The fellowship is available to advanced graduate students in economics, public policy, industrial relations, or other related fields who have completed all requirements toward a doctorate except for the dissertation. The fellow will receive a pro-rated $25,000 annual stipend and reside in the Washington, DC area. Health benefits are available if the fellow is not covered by his or her university.

The Forum for Youth Investment- Fellows Program

Supported by the Ford Foundation, The Forum for Youth Investment Fellows Program formalizes and expands The Forum's commitment to foster the next generation of leaders in the allied youth fields. The fellowship is an opportunity for young professionals under age 30 involved in direct service, technical assistance, or advocacy/organizing in the youth fields to learn more about national organizations, policy institutions, and think tanks. The fellowship targets emerging leaders who have demonstrated commitment and service at the local level, but have had little exposure or experience working in national organizations. Most fellowships run for six months. Fellows receive a stipend. Fellowship positions are filled on a rolling basis.

U.S. Department of Health and Human Services-Emerging Leaders Program

The Emerging Leaders Program allows participants to explore diverse career fields within the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), while providing them with the skills and experience needed for a career with the Federal Government. The challenging 24-month program provides training in departmental core competencies, multiple job rotations to gain familiarity with people and programs across HHS, mentors to provide career development advice and support, and training in specific technical competencies based on participants' chosen career path. Participants choose from five career paths: scientific, public health, information technology, social science, or administrative. During the first year of the program, participants will share in a development program that fosters both their personal and professional growth by doing 60-90 day rotational assignments within many of the Operating Divisions of HHS. The second year is devoted to technical development in their chosen career path. Interested applicants must speak with an HSS representative at one of the many career fairs they attend throughout the country. Applicants must be able to qualify at the GS-9 level by obtaining a Master's or higher level degree, having one year of specialized experience equivalent to a GS-7, or a combination of education and experience. In addition to an annual salary, participants will receive a competitive benefits package.

Women's Research and Education Institute (WREI)-Congressional Fellowship on Women and Public Policy

The Women's Research and Education Institute awards annual fellowships to a select number of graduate students with a proven commitment to equity for women. WREI fellows gain practical policymaking experience and graduate credit as they work from January to August as congressional legislative aides in Washington, DC. Fellows receive stipends for tuition and living expenses. The fellowship program is designed to encourage (1) more effective participation of women in the formulation of policy options, (2) better understanding of how policies affect women and men differently, and (3) greater appreciation of the fact that issues often defined as "women's issues" are really of equal importance to men. Fellows are selected on the basis of academic competence and their demonstrated interest in the public policy process. They are expected to be articulate, adaptable, and have strong writing skills. Only students who are currently in, or have recently completed, a Master's or doctoral program at an accredited institution in the United States are eligible.

American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU)-Ira Glassier Racial Justice Fellows

The Ira Glasser Racial Justice Fellows Program, named after a former Executive Director of the ACLU in recognition of his longstanding commitment to issues of racial justice and equity, is intended for individuals who will further the ACLU's commitment to racial justice. The Glasser fellows are placed throughout the ACLU, primarily in selected affiliates, to further develop, strengthen, and increase the ACLU's programmatic work on racial justice. The program is designed both to expand substantially racial justice programs and to search for new paradigms, new analyses, and new ways of looking at old problems in order to develop new remedies for the persistence of skin color injustice, despite the establishment of formal legal equality. In 2003, the ACLU will select up to six fellows, to work for up to two years, depending on the project. Stipends, including taxes and benefits, will be determined in accordance with applicable affiliate or national ACLU salary scale and scope of project. The program seeks applicants with a demonstrated commitment to racial justice from a wide variety of disciplines. Consideration will be given primarily to people with significant prior accomplishments but also to people of promise.

AmeriCorps*National Civial Community Corps (NCCC)

AmeriCorps*NCCC is part of AmeriCorps, a network of national service programs that engage more than 50,000 Americans each year in intensive service to meet critical needs in education, public safety, health, and the environment. It is a 10-month, full-time residential program for men and women between the ages of 18 and 24. AmeriCorps*NCCC combines the best practices of civilian service with the best aspects of military service, including leadership and team building. Members serve in teams of 10 to 15. Priority is given to projects in public safety, public health, and disaster relief. Teams are based at one of five campuses across the country (Denver, CO, Charleston, SC, Sacramento, CA, Perry Point, MD, or Washington, DC) but are sent to work on short-term projects in neighboring states. Participants receive an education award of $4,725 to help pay for college, graduate schools, or pay back students loans. They also receive lodging, meals, uniforms, health benefits, loan forbearance, and a living allowance of approximately $4,000.

AmeriCorps*State and National

AmeriCorps*State and National is part of AmeriCorps, a network of national service programs that engage more than 50,000 Americans each year in intensive service to meet critical needs in education, public safety, health, and the environment. More than three-quarters of AmeriCorps grant funding goes to governor-appointed state commissions, which in turn distribute and monitor grants to local nonprofits and agencies. The organizations receiving grants are responsible for recruiting, selecting, and supervising AmeriCorps members. AmeriCorps grantees include national groups like Habitat for Humanity, the American Red Cross, and Boys and Girls Clubs, as well as many small faith-based and community organizations. AmeriCorps is open to U.S. citizens, nationals, or lawful permanent residents aged 17 or older. Members serve full- or part-time over a 10- to 12-month period.

Full-time members receive an education award of $4,725 to pay for college, graduate school, or to pay back student loans. They also receive health insurance, training, and student loan deferment. About half of the members also receive a modest annual living allowance of about $9,300, along with health insurance. Members who serve part-time receive a partial education award.

Greenlining Institute-Academy Fellowships

The Greenlining Institute Academy Fellowships prepare minority students for careers in the non-profit sector, community development, and public affairs. Applicants must have completed their undergraduate studies and be enrolled in, or preparing for, graduate studies in public policy or a related field. With direction from their supervisor, Academy Fellows work independently and develop expertise in their own project area. Fellows conduct research, write reports and position papers, help organize community events, and interface regularly with multiethnic community, corporate, and government leaders. The ideal candidate is a graduate student who demonstrates superior communication skills, a strong work ethic, confidence, and a positive, professional attitude. A background in public policy is helpful but not necessary. Academy students are paid a monthly stipend.

Human Rights Watch (HRW)/ American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) Foundation-Aryeh Neier Fellowship

The newly created Aryeh Neier Fellowship honors the legacy of the Executive Director of the ACLU and then of HRW, who helped develop both organizations into powerful forces for justice and human rights. The fellow will work with both organizations on joint initiatives to strengthen respect for human rights in the United States. His or her work is likely to include field research in the United States, preparation of reports, advocacy, and development of litigation strategies. The fellow will be selected by a special committee from both organizations for a two-year period. He or she will work in the New York City offices of HRW and the ACLU, spending a year at each. Applicants should be recent law school graduates with exceptional analytic skills, an ability to speak and write clearly and forcefully, and a commitment to human rights and justice. They should have academic or work experience related to some aspect of the protection of human rights and civil liberties in the United States. The fellow will receive a salary of $35,000 to $40,000, with excellent medical and dental benefits.

Human Rights Watch (HRW)- Fellowships in International Human Rights

Each year, Human Rights Watch awards five fellowships to recent graduates of law schools or graduate programs (Master's and above) in journalism, international relations, area studies, or other relevant disciplines. Fellows work full-time for one year with one or more divisions of Human Rights Watch, in New York City or Washington, DC, monitoring human rights developments in various countries, conducting on-site investigations, drafting reports on human rights conditions, and engaging in advocacy aimed at publicizing, and curtailing human rights violations. Two of the fellowships, the Orville Schell and the Alan R. Finberg Fellowships, are open to recent graduates from any university worldwide at the Master's level and above. Three of the fellowships are restricted to graduates of specific schools: the Michael Bloomberg Fellowship is for graduates of graduate programs at John Hopkins University, including the School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS); the Furman Fellowship is for graduates of New York University School of Law; and the Leonard H. Sandler Fellowship is for graduates of Columbia Law School. Fellows receive a salary of $40,000, plus benefits.

Illinois Governor's Office-James H. Dunn, Jr. Memorial Fellowship and Vito Marzullo Internship Program

The Dunn Fellowship Program provides bright, highly motivated college graduates a unique opportunity to experience first-hand the operations of state government for one year. Fellows are recruited from public and private colleges and universities throughout the nation. Qualified applicants must hold a Bachelor's degree at the program's commencement and must have demonstrated a commitment to excellence through academic honors, leadership ability, extracurricular activities and community/public service involvement. The program begins in August and ends in July of the following year. Fellows spend one week receiving an orientation to state government and are then placed in different positions throughout the Governor's Office and in various agencies under the Governor's jurisdiction. Fellows are paid $27,900 annually and receive full state benefits. Vito Marzullo interns possess the same credentials as Dunn fellows and enjoy similar benefits and experiences; however, they must be Illinois residents.

Open Society Institute- New York City Community Fellowships Program

The Open Society Institute established the Community Fellowships Program to encourage and support individuals who are creating innovative public interest projects that address critical social issues. The goal of the program is to provide individuals with an opportunity to apply their leadership in community-led projects that empower and improve the quality of public life. Community fellows work in a wide range of social change activities including, but not limited to, organizing, service delivery, and advocacy. Fellows have created projects in such diverse areas as health, the arts, workers' rights, civic participation, education, and economic justice. Each year, 10 fellows are selected for the 18-month program. They receive a $48,750 stipend, a $2,000 start-up grant, and financial contributions towards graduate school debt payments. Applicants with a range of community experience, from disadvantaged communities, and in later stages of their professional career or who are recent graduates are encouraged to apply. Applicants do not have to be from New York City, but must perform their fellowship project in New York City.

The Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation-Ronald H. Brown Commercial Service Fellowships

The Brown Commercial Service Fellowship program is funded by the Department of Commerce and administered by the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation. The program provides talented undergraduates with an international and domestic public service education. Professional work study and practical classroom experience in global economic policy train fellows for successful entry into the Commercial Service. Selection takes place in alternate years. Fellows receive tuition, room and board, travel, and mandatory fees during the junior and senior years, as well as during the first year of graduate study. In addition, fellows must attend a summer institute between their junior and senior years of college. After graduation from college and before entering graduate school, students will work for the Department of Commerce in a domestic office. While in graduate school, students will work part-time for Commerce, and during the summer between the first and second year of graduate school, they will be assigned to an overseas post. Upon completion of their graduate studies, they will receive a one-year overseas assignment. Applicants must be sophomores with a 3.0 GPA.

Stick to Your Budget and Get the Most for Your Money in College

Adapting To College Life Can Be A Big Challenge For Your Wallet

This is not another boring, “how to budget your life” article about how to save money while not having fun. These are useful shortcuts to make living today easy on yourself and on your wallet now that you are on your own.

Three Tips To Save Money

Food: Eating in college can be challenging, especially because most dorm rooms don’t have a kitchen. It’s always a good idea to take advantage of a meal plan and cafeteria options. This way, if you do run out of money, you’ll always have a place to eat. If you plan on getting a part-time job, think about working at a restaurant. The perks? Discounted, half-priced meals and some extra cash, which is never a bad thing!

Entertainment: Your school and local papers are full of activities that don’t cost much money. Concerts, sporting events, festivals, and art shows are scheduled on a weekly basis. Do some research and you will be rewarded with great times on just a few dimes. If you enjoy movies, sign up for Netflix.com. For a flat rate you can rent an unlimited amount of movies each month without incurring late fees. Joining a club or two is also a great way to meet people and to participate in free events. There is a wide variety of clubs for every different hobby and interest.

Books: The easy way around this large chunk of your college expenses is to buy

— Anthony Sulser
for Tips for a Young Investor

your books online! School bookstores are loaded with all the books you need, but at double the cost of what you would pay online. You can also visit the classrooms on your schedule to find students who took the class before and want to sell their used textbooks. There are postings all over doors, windows and chalkboards, plus you might get a tip or two about the class you’re about to take.

Three Tips To Avoid Financial Trouble

Eating out: It’s amazing how fast lunches and dinners add up. Split market visits with roommates and reduce the cost of your meals.

Cell phone calls: You only have one chance to sign up with minutes, so be sure to get enough. It’s better to “roll” them over into the next month, than to get hit with a huge bill.

Bank fees and interest: Watch your overdraft protection. Sure it’s a great way to get support when you run out of money, but overdraft fees are about $25 for each transaction and they usually come in bunches.

The most important thing to keep in mind when you are budgeting yourself in college is to communicate with your parents. They raised you and know you better than anyone else! Share your planned budget with them and write it down. Even if you don’t follow it every month, you are more likely to stick to a plan if you commit it to paper.

College Savings

Have you been watching the rise in the cost of a college degree? The figures are staggering! And those of you who have taken the extra step of actually projecting the numbers into the future to establish the amount of money you need to have at hand for your children's education are probably still reeling from the shock. But, what is the cost of investing in a formal education? According to a recent survey by the U.S. Census Bureau, these are the annual earnings that can be expected by workers 18 years of age and older in each of the following categories:

Without a High School Diploma: $18,062
High School Diploma: $26,059
Bachelor's Degree: $49,674
Master's Degree: $61,033
Doctorate: $79,986

According to the College Board, the potential lifetime earnings gap between a high school graduate and a college graduate could easily reach one million dollars.

So, if you're helping send a child to college, it's possible that your contribution will make a significant impact on the child's quality of life in the future. When should you start saving for a child's future college education? Now!

Make time your most precious ally. When you give yourself a head start, you are putting time on your side. Since your money will have longer to grow, the power of compounding interest can propel you into exponential gains.

—By Julie Stav

Years ago, your choices were limited. Today, there are several new, tax-favored choices that can help put your children's college education within closer reach.

One of the most popular programs for college savings is a Coverdell Education Savings Account. Previously called an Education IRA, Coverdell Education Savings Accounts offer the opportunity to set aside up to $2,000 per child (under age 18) for families with a joint modified adjusted gross income of $190,000 or less ($95,000 for single filers). The maximum is reduced proportionately according to your income. These accounts grow on a tax-deferred basis, which means that you will not have to pay taxes on the gains and, if the money is used for eligible educational expenses (such as room board, tuition, books and supplies), no taxes will be paid upon withdrawal of the funds.

Any adult can make contributions to the account and the money can be used for elementary, secondary and higher education.

In order to avoid paying penalties and taxes, a Coverdell account must be completely depleted by the time the student turns 30 years of age.

If you find the $2,000 limit too restrictive or are disqualified by the income provisions under a Coverdell Plan, you have another option available: a 529 Plan.

A 529 Plan, named after a section of the IRS code with the same number, is open to any individual, regardless of income. The maximum yearly contribution allowed under this plan can reach as much as $55,000 and the gains are not subject to federal income taxes during the accumulation period or after withdrawals, provided they are used to cover eligible education expenses.

Your tax bracket, your state of residence and your income level may determine the best option for you to accumulate the funds your children need for their education.

For more information, visit a State Farm agent or www.savingforcollege.com.

This advice was not intended or written to be used, and it cannot be used by the taxpayer, for the purpose of avoiding penalties that may be imposed on the taxpayer.

How to Land an Internship

An internship is not only a great experience; it is also a great way to jump-start your career. However, finding the perfect internship takes time and effort.

Time It Right

Finding an internship is not a last-minute project. You need time to research your options, prepare your application, and interview for the position. And if you want college credit for your internship, you will have to work with your school beforehand. So plan ahead and start your search at least three months in advance.

Be Pro-active

Internships will not come to you. It is up to you to find them or, in some cases, create them. But there are a lot of resources to give you a head start. Start with your college. Many companies actively recruit interns on college campuses. To find your leads check out:

- » Your department. Industry leaders often contact departments directly to find the best and the brightest.
- » The college placement center. Center staff can direct you to resources to help you find promising programs.

The Internet can also provide great leads for internships. Free online databases, such as Internshipprograms.com (www.internshipprograms.com) and Monster.com (www.monster.com), provide information about programs nationwide. And many databases allow you to narrow your search by industry, company, or geography. You can also use the web to learn more about internship opportunities at companies that interest you. Check the company's home page for internship opportunities and contact information for the Human Resources department. Do not worry if you do not find established internship programs that interest you. It can pay to take the initiative and offer your services even if the company does not run a formal program.

Get Moving

Once you have identified a prospective intern program, you need to make contact. If you are applying to a formal internship program, request an application form and submit the required materials as soon as possible. Application requirements often include:

- » an application form
- » an essay describing your background and goals
- » letters of recommendation
- » transcripts
- » a portfolio of your work

If you are proposing an internship to a company that does not usually hire interns, you may need to work a little harder. Start by identifying the department you would like to work for. Learn what you can about the organization and the department, using online resources such as www.hoovers.com or print media such as newspapers, magazines, and journals. Next, draft a letter of inquiry outlining your interest in the company, your background, and your desire to serve as an intern. Use the letter to demonstrate your knowledge of the organization and the industry by commenting on recent company projects or media coverage. Suggest ways your background could work for the company. Be sure to include your resume and current contact information.

Do Not Just Apply

Landing an internship requires more than just filling out an application. To stand out, you must be able to speak intelligently about the company and your future plans. Do this by researching the company and the industry.

- » Visit your career placement office. Counselors should be able to direct you toward corporate resources.
- » Ask your college reference librarian about resources for companies in your field such as Infotrac, an electronic database available at most libraries.
- » Also check Hoovers Online (www.hoovers.com) for exhaustive information about various companies.

By knowing where to look and how to prepare, you can land a great internship. The opportunities are out there—it is up to you to go out and find them.

Building the Perfect Resume

A good resume is vital. It is your calling card to a prospective employer—one that lays out your qualifications and hopefully gets you a job interview. Remember, most employers will spend less than five minutes initially reviewing your resume. Follow these guidelines to make sure your resume gets you noticed.

Be sure to include these basics:

- » Contact information: full name, phone number, school and permanent address, and e-mail address
- » Education: school, degree, date of completion, honors, and special course work. If you are still in school, provide your expected date of completion.
- » Experience: In addition to work history, include relevant non-professional experience, such as internships, extracurricular activities, and significant volunteer work.
- » Skills: List any computer systems, office equipment, and software programs you are familiar with, as well as particular office skills (shorthand, typing speed, etc.).
- » Other Categories: If they are relevant, include publications, awards, leadership positions, or other notable achievements.

There are many different ways to organize your resume. The most basic formats include:

- » Chronological: To emphasize your work history, list your jobs and activities, beginning with your most recent experiences.
- » Functional: To emphasize your skill sets, group your experiences under categorical headings, such as Leadership or Technology Support.

The key is to pick a format that presents your achievements most effectively—as well as being easy to read and comprehend.

Tips for a Winning Resume:

- » Keep it brief. Limit your resume to one page. Instead of paragraphs, use bullet-pointed lists.
- » Provide meaningful descriptions of your experiences. When detailing your job history, use short sentences or fragments to demonstrate your relevant experience.
- » Use strong action words (“developed and implemented a new filing system”; “created two new membership programs”).
- » Use formatting to help you out. Capitalize and use boldface, italics, or underlining to help organize the information.
- » Proofread. Use spell-check, double-check your contact information, and make sure your formatting is consistent. Ask a friend or family member to proofread it as well.
- » Custom fit your resume. Revise your resume for each job application to make sure it fits the opportunity at hand.

The final test: Take a look at your resume from an arm’s distance. Is it confusing and text-heavy? Or is it easy to find the information you need? Please be sure your resume is reader-friendly.

Formatting Your Resume

There is no right way to organize your resume. Different formats create different effects—and a different picture of you! Determine which format (chronological, functional, or combination) will put you in the best light.

Chronological Resume

In the chronological resume, job history is organized sequentially, with the most recent job listed first. Job titles and employers are emphasized and duties and accomplishments are described in detail.

Use the chronological format if:

- » you have an impressive list of recent employers and/or job titles
- » your job history shows progress
- » you are staying in the same career field

Do not use the chronological format if:

- » you have changed employers frequently and/or have gaps in your employment
- » you do not want to emphasize your age
- » you are changing career fields

Functional Resume

Functional resumes highlight skills and accomplishments developed through work, academic, and community experiences. This approach lets you group your education, experience, and activities into categories that support your job objectives.

Use the functional resume if:

- » you have a variety of unrelated work experiences
- » you want to market skills and experiences gained through academic coursework or volunteering
- » you are changing career fields

Do not use the functional resume if:

- » you have little work or leadership experience
- » you are entering a traditional field (education, government, etc.) where employment history is important
- » you want to emphasize your career growth

Combination Resume

The combination format merges the direct approach of the chronological format while stressing skills like the functional format. This format is great if your experience is limited, widely varied, or not clearly related to your job objective.

The initial look employers will give your resume will be quick, so no matter what resume format you decide to use, be sure to put the most important points first. Craft the right resume, and it will get you noticed!

Top Ten Tips for Winning Scholarship Applications

1. Apply only if you are eligible.

Read all the scholarship requirements and directions carefully. Make sure you are eligible before you send in your application.

2. Complete the application in full.

If a question does not apply to you, note that on the application. Do not leave a question blank. Be sure to supply all additional supporting materials, including transcripts, letters of recommendation, and essays.

3. Follow directions. Provide everything that is required. However, do not supply things that are not requested—you could be disqualified.

4. Neatness counts. Always type your application, or if you must print do so neatly and legibly. Make a couple of photocopies of all the forms before you fill them out. Use the copies as working drafts as you develop your application packet.

5. Write an essay that makes a strong impression. The key to writing a strong essay is to be personal and specific. Include concrete details to make your experience come alive: the who, what, where, and when of your topic. The simplest experience can be monumental if you honestly present how you were affected.

6. Watch all deadlines. To help keep yourself on track, impose your own deadline that is at least two weeks prior to the official deadline. Use the buffer time to make sure everything is ready on time. Do not rely on extensions—very few scholarship providers allow them at all.

7. Make sure your application gets where it needs to go. Put your name (and Social Security number, if applicable) on all pages of the application. Pieces of your application may get lost unless they are clearly identified.

8. Keep a back-up file in case anything goes wrong. Before sending the application, make a copy of the entire packet. If your application goes astray, you will be able to reproduce it quickly.

9. Give it a final ‘once-over.’ Proofread the entire application carefully. Be on the lookout for misspelled words or grammatical errors. Ask a friend, teacher, or parent to proofread it as well.

10. Ask for help if you need it. If you have problems with the application, do not hesitate to call the funding organization.

Writing the Scholarship Essay

- » Think before you write. Brainstorm to generate some good ideas and then create an outline to help you get going.
- » Be original. The judges may be asked to review hundreds of essays. It is your job to make your essay stand out from the rest. So be creative in your answers.
- » Show, do not tell. Use stories, examples, and anecdotes to individualize your essay and demonstrate the point you want to make. By using specifics, you will avoid vagueness and generalities and make a stronger impression.
- » Develop a theme. Do not simply list all your achievements. Decide on a theme you want to convey that sums up the impression you want to make. Write about experiences that develop that theme.
- » Know your audience. Personal essays are not 'one size fits all.' Write a new essay for each application—one that fits the interests and requirements of that scholarship organization. You are asking to be selected as the representative for that group. The essay is your chance to show how you are the ideal representative.
- » Submit an essay that is neat and readable. Make sure your essay is neatly typed, and that there is a lot of 'white space' on the page. Double-space the essay, and provide adequate margins (1"–1 ½") on all sides.
- » Make sure your essay is well written. Proofread carefully, check spelling and grammar. Most importantly, have friends or teachers look over your essay. Another pair of eyes can catch errors you might miss.

Holding Your Own in a Scholarship Interview

A good interview is vital to your scholarship application. It is an opportunity to supplement your credentials with the kind of impression that can not be put on paper. But for most, interviews are a major source of stress. Keep the anxiety level under control by thinking ahead and following these tips from a scholarship expert.

It is a Conversation

To keep yourself relaxed, think of your interview as a conversation rather than a test. The interviewers are there to learn more about you. View the interview as an opportunity to discuss your goals, plans, and concerns with experienced professionals.

Be Prepared

You can also decrease your anxiety level and improve your experience by anticipating the questions you will be asked. Be prepared to discuss:

- » Your background: educational history, employment experiences, family background, and upbringing
- » Your academic achievements: class-rank, grade point average, awards you have won or projects you have undertaken (science fairs, debate competitions, etc.)
- » Your future plans: academic plans, career plans
- » Your hobbies and interests: extracurricular activities, skills, jobs, etc.
- » Your financial profile and needs: income, savings, parent's resources, level of financial need, anticipated expenses, etc. Information about your financial resources is especially important if the scholarship is need-based.
- » Your personal "value structure": the things you think are important in your life. Information about your personal value structure helps the interviewers determine whether you would serve as an appropriate representative for their organization.

Do Not Forget the Basics

To keep your interview running smoothly:

- » Be punctual. Check the interview time and location before leaving home.
- » Dress appropriately. Select conservative, semi-formal wear: slacks and a jacket or a dress shirt for men; dresses, skirts, or pantsuits for women. NEVER WEAR JEANS OR T-SHIRTS TO AN INTERVIEW.
- » Make a good first impression. When you meet the interviewers, introduce yourself, make eye contact, and use a firm handshake.
- » Be brief and honest with your answers. Try to sum up your thoughts quickly. Interviewers will ask follow-up questions if they want to know more.
- » Have some questions ready for the interviewers. Prepare these questions in advance by researching the sponsoring organization, school, or company.
- » Be prepared to reiterate the basic information you supplied on your application. Review your application before the interview to jog your memory.

- » Do not be negative. Interviewers value the individual who perceives difficult situations as challenging and interesting.
- » Do not be afraid to say “I don’t know” or ask questions. It is better to ask for clarification than to miss an opportunity to produce an insightful answer.
- » Do not chew gum, bite nails, smoke, yawn, stretch, or slouch.
- » Show your appreciation. Thank the interviewers for their time at the end of the interview. Afterwards, send a thank-you note.

Use these tips to prepare, and you may find the interview is not so scary after all.

Working For Free: The Benefits of Internships

College is not the only way to prepare for a career. New grads need to offer something extra to prospective employers. That is where an internship comes in.

An internship is an employment situation in which a student works (often for free) in order to gain hands-on experience. Internships offer valuable work experience, help you develop marketable skills, and beef up your resume. Best of all, they can help you land a job after college.

But internships can also help you throughout your college career. Here are a number of things internships help you do:

Get Your Foot in the Door

For the most competitive careers, like journalism or theater, internships are essential. In a crowded job market, an internship provides:

- » Experience. Studying a major is one thing; applying that knowledge to “real world” situations is entirely another. In an internship, you learn to back up your smarts with action.
- » Contacts. Working with professionals, you tap into a network that can offer references, advice, and information about new job opportunities.
- » A future job. Many companies use their internship programs to bolster their recruitment efforts. Working with interns gives them the chance to try out motivated, ambitious students before employing them. If the intern makes the grade, the company may make a permanent job offer.

Develop New Skills

Internships can also help you diversify your background and experience. While it is good to have an area of strength (a focus for your career) more diverse skills in a variety of fields can make you more marketable to a potential employee.

This type of internship is especially important for liberal arts majors. Adding some practical job skills to your academic expertise makes you a much better candidate for any job.

Do Some Comparison Shopping

Use an internship to sample various fields before choosing your major. You may not need specialized skills to do this sort of internship; many organizations rely on interns for projects that require only general skills and a good work ethic.

This sort of internship gives you important insights into the typical workday in this company or field. Exploring careers in this way can help you choose a major—and a future career.

So you see, there are different kinds of internships for different phases of your college career. Not merely resume builders, internships can play a crucial role in every stage of career planning. The time to think about applying for an internship is now—plan early and use these “experimental careers” as a means to pave the way to a bright future.

Top Tips for Interns

Even if you are working for free, your internship can be worth a fortune—in job experience and valuable career connections. But it is up to you to see that your efforts pay off. Make the right moves to make the most of your internship.

Be Professional

To impress, take your responsibilities seriously. Treat your internship like a full-time job by always behaving professionally.

- » Show up on time. Tardiness is not a quality employers look for in potential hires.
- » Take only the specified break-time for lunch or coffee and always return on time.
- » Avoid missing work. If you must be absent, request permission from your supervisor in advance.
- » Dress for success. Take cues from your co-workers and dress appropriately.

Project a Positive Attitude

Almost as important as the work you do is the way you work. Keep motivated and positive to make sure you are the kind of worker employers love to hire.

- » Do not complain about the tasks you are given. Even menial chores can teach you a lot about how an office works. Approaching your work with enthusiasm is a good way to convince supervisors to give you bigger responsibilities.
- » Get along with others. Be pleasant and courteous to everyone and try to get along with the other interns.
- » Stay out of the grapevine. Gossiping about employees, interns, or company business can get you in trouble.

Make the Most of Your Work

Your internship can be the foundation of a great career. Be proactive about using your internship to lay that foundation.

- » Develop additional responsibilities. Interns who identify office needs and ask to take on new challenges demonstrate the initiative and motivation that companies are looking for.
- » Look for opportunities to further your education. If there is a project that interests you, ask your supervisor if you can help out.
- » Network. Getting to know people in the company can lead to great opportunities. You can do this by arranging informational interviews with full-time staff members.
- » Before you leave your internship, schedule an interview with your supervisor to review your performance.

Maintain a Record

Even if your internship experience seems unforgettable, you may need to refresh your memory later on. Keeping a record can help.

- » Log in with a daily journal. Create a list of your daily tasks and chart your feelings about your work. Which tasks did you like the most? Which seemed the least interesting? Reviewing the list later can help you make future career decisions.
- » Record your various projects. Describe the purpose and guidelines of each project and your particular contribution.
- » Keep a professional souvenir. Ask your supervisor if you can keep a copy of any projects you work on—brochures, reports, etc. These can be a great addition to a portfolio when you are looking for a job.

- » Keep in touch and keep a record of your performance. Ask for copies of any performance reviews. At the end of your internship, ask for a letter of reference.

Your internship might not make you rich, but it can bring lots of rewards to your career. Make the most of your experience and start out right on your career path.
