2015 Legislation: Results
Relevant to: All Licensees

The 2015 legislative session was a busy one. The Board will be sending out more detail about impacts and changes to the law, as well as details about upcoming administrative rulemaking activities so we can get your input.

OMCB Agency Bills:

HB 2471 (addresses FSP and Embalmer apprenticeships, internships, testing & industry entry) was signed by the Governor on June 11, 2015 and becomes effective on January 1, 2016. OMCB will establish a rulemaking advisory group in the near future to determine the educational competency requirements and related rules. If you are interested in participating, please contact the Board office.

HB 2472 (would allow for self-inspections and industry members to perform certain inspections) was signed by the Governor on June 22, 2015 and becomes effective on January 1, 2016.

HB 5023 (OMCB’s biennial budget) was signed by the Governor on May 28, 2015.

Continuing Education vs Competency-Based Requirements
Relevant to: All Licensees

Competency-Based Requirements: HB 2471B
This House Bill brings a number of changes to ORS 692, which governs internships, apprenticeships & reciprocity for FSP & Embalmer licenses. The new law is effective January 2016, and the Board will work with licensees and other interested parties to develop specific requirements related to the changes. The first discussion opportunity will take place during our community planning day – we’d love for you to join us. Additionally, we will be establishing an advisory committee in the near future to address this topic and develop administrative rules, which will be made available to all interested parties for consideration and comment before Board adoption.

Continuing Education Requirements on Hold:
In 2014, the Board issued a proposed administrative rulemaking process to establish continuing education for all licensees. Based on discussions with licensees and other interested parties, the Board took all comments into consideration and chose not to move forward at this time with the current proposed rules. This process has not progressed due to the recent legislative session. The Board anticipates there will be additional public hearings to comment on a potentially revised program in early 2016.

FRONTLINE Documentary: Facing Death

Relevant to: All Licensees

How far would you go to sustain the life of someone you love, or your own? When the moment comes, and you’re confronted with the prospect of “pulling the plug,” do you know how you’ll respond?

In Facing Death, FRONTLINE gains extraordinary access to The Mount Sinai Medical Center, one of New York’s biggest hospitals, to take a closer measure of today’s complicated end-of-life-decisions. In this intimate, groundbreaking film, doctors, patients and families speak with remarkable candor about the increasingly difficult choices people are making at the end of life: when to remove a breathing tube in the ICU; when to continue treatment for patients with aggressive blood cancers; when to perform a surgery; and when to call for hospice.

“What modern medicine is capable of doing is what 20 years ago was considered science fiction,” Dr. David Muller, dean of medical education at Mount Sinai, tells FRONTLINE. “You can keep their lungs breathing and keep their heart beating and keep their blood pressure up and keep their blood flowing… That suspended animation [can go] on forever. [So] the decisions at the end of life have become much more complicated for everyone involved.”

“Some physicians can keep giving treatment, and some find it unacceptable, and that, I think, is where the art of science and medicine mix,” says Dr. Keren Osman of Mount Sinai’s Bone Marrow Transplant Unit. “The lines are blurred, and they’re also different for different physicians. Sometimes there are patients for whom… I wish we’d stopped earlier because I think they suffered unnecessarily… Sometimes there are forces outside of the patient and myself that are the patient’s family, other physicians. Sorting that out can be very, very tricky in those moments.”

Decisions about how aggressively to treat a patient can be complicated for doctors as well. “It’s very difficult for me to say to a patient, ‘I don’t think you have any treatment opportunity.’ I never said that to any patient, never,” Dr. Celia Grosskreutz of Mount Sinai’s Bone Marrow Transplant Unit tells FRONTLINE. “I can’t humanely say that to a patient. I always say, ‘Well, we can do this or the other,’ even if it’s in a palliative way. But I offer. I always say there is something to do.”

Dr. Judith Nelson, an ICU doctor at Mount Sinai states, “Nobody wants to die. And at the same time, nobody wants to die badly. And that is my job. My job is to try to prevent people from dying if there’s a possible way to do it that will preserve a quality of life that’s acceptable to them, but if they can’t go on, to try to make the death a good death.”

Spotlight on Oregon’s Center for Health Statistics: A Great Resource for Information

Relevant to: All Licensees

The Center for Health Statistics (CHS) is Oregon’s Vital Records Office. Oregon law requires all vital events that occur in Oregon, such as births, marriages, divorces, and deaths to be recorded, registered, and filed with the CHS office. The office is also responsible for certifying, amending, and issuing these vital event records.

CHS is responsible for issuing certified copies of vital records for events that occurred within the state of Oregon. Vital records are the legal records documenting a vital event, such as a birth, death, marriage, Oregon registered domestic partnership, divorce or fetal death. Birth certificates are the primary documents used to establish identity.

CHS has birth and death records dating from 1903, marriage records from 1906, and divorce certificates (not decrees) from 1925.

International Death Care News: The Ruriden Columbarium

Relevant to: All Licensees

The Ruriden columbarium, located in Tokyo, Japan and operated by the Koukokuji Buddhist temple, took two years to build and houses 2,046 glass Buddha statues. Each glass Buddha represents a drawer holding the ashes of the deceased. An identification card allows the alter owner to access the building and lights up the corresponding statute. The ashes are stored for 33 years before being buried below the Ruriden. Currently, 600 alterations are in use and another 300 are reserved.

Veterans’ Combat Status Reporting

Relevant to: FSPs

The Center for Health Statistics (CHS) began collecting Veteran’s combat status and combat zone information on death certificates in 2012 as required by law. CHS staff analyzed the data and noticed a high percentage of “unknown” or missing responses on the veteran combat status questions over the past three years. After three years of newsletters and bulk notifications; the number of unknowns continues to be so high that CHS staff is unable to provide accurate statistics about veterans’ deaths related to combat status. At least 19 funeral homes have an average of unanswered questions on combat above 60 percent. You can help improve the responses to the combat status question by taking the following actions:

- Review the death certificate worksheet that you use to gather information from an informant to make sure the two questions on veterans’ combat status and combat zones are being asked.
- Train and remind funeral home staff to ask the veterans' combat status and combat zone questions for all decedents who were veterans.
- Review the veteran documents provided by the family to request for Veterans Affairs benefits.
- Talk with funeral homes with good reporting percentages to get tips to improve reporting.

Funeral homes with room for improvement will receive letters with information on their percentage of veterans with unknown or missing answers to the combat status and combat zone questions, as well as additional tips on how to improve future reporting.
