

JULY 9, 2009

APWA

APWA recognizes outstanding public works projects across North America

From historic building restoration to multi-million dollar bridges and roads, the American Public Works Association (APWA) presents Projects of the Year awards annually, recognizing management and administration excellence. The awards highlight alliances between managing agencies, contractors, consultants and their cooperative achievements. Awards will be presented at the 2009 APWA International Public Works Congress & Exposition held Sept. 13-16 in Columbus, Ohio. In this year's group, 19 projects were recognized in varying categories. For example, in the transportation category, the Oregon Department of Transportation, along with Slayden Construction (contractor) and T.Y. Lin International (consultant), were recognized for the Oregon 38: Elk Creek-Hardscrabble Creek project, wherein five bridges along a narrow, 14-mile corridor were replaced.

COMMENTS

[\[READ FULL ARTICLE\]](#)