38		2004	Licensing	OLCC needs to expedite licenses, especially in Portland. Some applications get undue amount of investigation. Businesses are paying for leases for months before they have a liquor license, and this is not viable for restaurants. Applicants need earlier contacts with investigator to pose their questions, rather than letters that say "do not call me." Have a list of OLCC contacts available. Investigators seem too overworked. Let investigators do investigative work, and have a central person answer questions. Less one-on-one in-person contact now and that hurts process. Be looser in getting off-premises applications processed if there are no compliance issues. Good operators have to wait long because of "bad" operators. Define "bad" behavior better. Distinguish between owner vs. type of operation issues and new vs. existing outlets. 90-120 days is not okay. Evaluate the complete licensing process, including the application packet. OLCC should review the state of Washington's (they shortcut with initial interview) or other states' licensing process which don't take so long.		X
46A		2004	Licensing	On-line licensing		X
46B	3	2004	Licensing	Partners requested OLCC review regulatory forms, including statement of funding form and conditional letter of authority. People do not understand them. Partners confused about different between true name and interest in business. "Shall" vs. "may" in rules or instructions is confusing and elicits different emotional reactions.		X
196		2009	Server Education	Require clerks and agents to received training (Maury Hornstein)	X
197		2009	Server Education	Economy service - off-premises training is critical (Glenn Lewis)	X
