Tick Tock. Goodbye Daylight Saving Time!

At 2 a.m. Sunday morning (Nov.4), the clocks are turned back one hour as Daylight Saving Time ends. So for the imbibing crowd, that could mean that nightclubs, bars, taverns and other licensed premises may remain open an extra hour.

According to the Oregon Liquor Control Commission, liquor licensees must stop serving/selling alcohol at the new 2:30 a.m. (ST), which means they get an extra hour to be open.

However, they'll have to return that 60 minutes in the spring when the clocks are pushed forward an hour.
