

JJPS Security

Oregon's Juvenile Justice Information System (JJIS) and its subsystem, the Juvenile Justice Partner System (JJPS), provides access to information about youth offenders in county juvenile departments and the Oregon Youth Authority. As a user of JJIS data, JJPS subscribers have an ethical responsibility to the multiple jurisdictions whose data are contained in JJIS. JJPS displays readily available JJIS data elements that have been determined by the JJIS Steering Committee to be releasable to the public. Local county juvenile departments or OYA policy may restrict access or delay release of public information in specific circumstances.

The JJIS Steering Committee will monitor access to JJPS and retains the right to terminate access at any time for violating policy.

Security Coordinators from sponsoring juvenile justice agencies will coordinate individual user security agreements; user access authorization; formal procedures for review; and termination of access on the date that access privileges are terminated.

JJIS Vision

To promote public safety and youth accountability, and to offer opportunities for rehabilitation to youth, through the development of a statewide juvenile justice information system that:

- Provides a comprehensive view of information about juvenile offenders across Oregon's state and county juvenile justice agencies;
- Provides comprehensive support for managing individual juvenile offender cases and tracking juveniles through the juvenile justice process;
- Provides the capacity for and aids in the overall planning, development, and evaluation of programs designed to reduce juvenile crime; and
- Recognizes and supports the common needs of juvenile justice partnership agencies.

Juvenile Justice Partner System

a web-based JJIS component designed for public safety agencies

What is JJPS?

The Juvenile Justice Partner System (JJPS) is a component of the statewide-integrated Juvenile Justice Information System (JJIS). JJIS and JJPS provide access to information about youth under the jurisdiction of all Oregon county juvenile departments and the Oregon Youth Authority.

JJIS and JJPS are administered by the State of Oregon through the Oregon Youth Authority (OYA) as a collaborative partnership between the OYA and Oregon's county juvenile departments.

JJPS displays readily available JJIS data elements that have been determined by the JJIS Steering Committee to be releasable.

Only delinquency case data that may be released to the public are displayed in JJPS – dependency information and cases restricted by local juvenile departments or OYA policy are not displayed.

Historical information has been converted from multiple jurisdictions' information systems. Additionally, cases pending expungement are displayed. Consequently, referral information must be verified with the local county juvenile department.

The screenshot displays the Oregon Juvenile Justice Partner System interface. At the top, it says "Oregon Juvenile Justice Partner System" with a "Log off" link. Below this is a search section with a "Search By" dropdown menu set to "Youth Name". There are input fields for "Last Name", "First Name", "DOB", and "Sex", along with a checkbox for "Last Name Sounds Like" and "Search" and "Clear" buttons. A table with columns "JJIS No.", "Youth", "DOB", and "Age" is visible. A yellow callout box labeled "Youth Search and Public Information Screens" points to the search area. Below the table is another "Oregon Juvenile Justice Partner System" header, followed by a form with fields for "Youth Name", "Sex", "JJIS Number", "Age", "Status", "Birth Date", "Opened Date", "Mother's Name", "Closed Date", "Mother's", "Jurisdiction", "Address", "Worker Name", "Father's Name", "Worker Phone", "Father's", and "Address". At the bottom, there is a "Referrals" table with columns "Ref #", "Received ORS #", "Office Allegation", "Allegation Disposition", "Allegation Status", and "Status Date". A "Back to Search" button is at the bottom right.

What can JJPS do for public safety agencies?

JJPS provides a real-time view of the status of youth cases in the juvenile justice system. Designated public safety agency users can search by youth name, id number, or referral, and view releasable information on:

- county of jurisdiction
- parents contact information
- parole/probation worker contacts
- referrals, findings, and dispositions

How do public safety agencies access JJPS?

All a public agency needs is a sponsor, access to the Internet, and a User ID and Password.

Interested public safety agency directors should request sponsorship and approval for access to JJPS from the appropriate local juvenile department director or the OYA Director's Office. A written request is required to initiate coordination of security agreements and any other written agreements required between agencies.

Upon completion of a site's security forms, JJPS users will receive a User ID and Password. A computer-based training CD is available.
