Our lessons in resilience and courage ring true for students whose families were experiencing poverty before the economic impacts of the pandemic began to be felt. During the necessary school closure due to COVID-19, our TMs are continued regular contact with each of their students, assessing family needs, providing access to resources and giving critical socio-emotional support and guidance. We stretched ourselves to increase services (outreach/communication, access to basic health information and food resources) during a time when the achievement gap for low income youth and youth of color was likely to grow.
