Problem statement:

Fragmented financing, delivery systems, and services fail to serve and exacerbate poor health outcomes for children, adolescents, adults, and older adults.

- 1) Access to behavioral health services, both specialty and general, do not meet the needs of all Oregonians in the right places at the right times in a culturally and linguistically specific manner
- 2) Continuum of care, service integration, and coordination between the systems of criminal justice, human services, health, and education is insufficient, administratively complex, and lacking in strategies addressing prevention for all populations.
- 3) Social determinants of health, including insufficient housing, employment, and transportation, create barriers to behavioral health resources that vary by community.
