To those receiving services and their families,

Changes are coming to how your disability-related needs are assessed and who does that work. These changes will make information about how your needs are assessed more objective and understandable.

Why this change? The federal government requires everyone to have an assessment to receive services. The Oregon State Legislature told the Office of Developmental Disabilities Services (ODDS) to create and use a single assessment. Right now, we have five different assessments. Having one assessment will help make access to supports less confusing. The new assessment is called the Oregon Needs Assessment, or ONA.

The ONA will not change your services right now. At some point in 2019, the ONA may change the number of hours of service you receive if you live at home, or the amount of funding a provider organization gets to support you in a foster home or a group home.

The ONA results will document the kinds of things you might want help with in your daily life. But you will take the lead in deciding how you want to receive services to help you achieve your goals, and what services will best meet your needs.

Another change is who will do your assessment. For many people, the case manager did them in the past. Now a separate person who is specially trained to do the ONA assessment will do your assessment.

- Assessors make sure everyone is getting assessed the same way.
- Assessors will be trained to be objective when doing assessments.

Having someone do assessments who is not your case manager will let the case manager focus on helping you plan for your future.

"Assisting People to Become Independent, Healthy and Safe"

Your case manager and assessor will work together to support you through the process. Your case manager can be with you for your assessment. You are welcome to invite others who can help you answer questions during your assessment. If you have questions, please let your case manager or assessor know.

If you want a copy of your assessment, please ask for it. Results from your assessment will not be ready right away. The assessor or case manager can give you a copy when it is completed.

Who do you talk to if you think the ONA results do not accurately reflect your needs or you have questions?

- You can talk with your case manager; the case manager can follow up with the assessor.
- You may talk with the assessor directly.
- You have the right to file a complaint if you disagree or have concerns. Your case manager or assessor can show you how. You can also follow the steps at:
