About the State Library of Oregon

Introduction
Providing services for over 100 years, the State Library of Oregon is located in a beautiful building built in 1939 to serve the citizens of Oregon. The mission of the State Library is to provide leadership and resources to continue growing vibrant library services for Oregonians with print disabilities, the Legislature and state government, and all Oregonians through local libraries.

Since its founding, the State Library has been governed by an independent board. The present board consists of nine members from different areas throughout the state who are appointed by the governor to serve four-year terms. The operation of the library and the functions of the board are governed by Oregon Revised Statute (ORS) 357.

Mission
All Oregonians have the information essential to be engaged citizens, to strengthen our communities and to build a prosperous state.

The State Library provides leadership and resources to continue growing vibrant library services for Oregonians with print disabilities, the Legislature and state government, and all Oregonians through local libraries.

Core values

Open to opportunity
We try new things, take smart risks, and ask "what if" to innovate and problem solve.

Excellent customer service
We learn from and respond to our patrons and co-workers so we can better deliver services to meet needs.

Strong community
We compromise, cooperate, and connect to achieve mutual success.

Professionalism
We are honest, good stewards, keep our commitments, and are responsible for our actions.

Personal leadership
We take initiative, actively participate, and use open two-way communication to improve ourselves and our work environment.
History

1905: House Bill 6 establishing the Oregon Library Commission is introduced by Congressman Linthicum in the 23rd Legislative Assembly and is first read January 10. The Bill passes the House on January 21 and the Senate on February 3.

Cornelia Marvin becomes the Secretary of the Oregon Library Commission with a salary of $1,200 a year.

1907: The Legislature passes a law requiring the state printer to give the State Librarian bound copies of state publications, to be distributed to selected Oregon libraries, marking the beginning of the Oregon Documents Depository Program.

1913: The Legislature passes a bill to create the Supreme Court Library (formerly known as the State Library) and renames the Oregon Library Commission the Oregon State Library.

1932: Oregon State Library (OSL) offers reading courses. Courses consist of reading suggestions on various topics, aimed at unemployed youth who are unable to attend college; in the first 18 months of service more than 1,470 students take part. It later grows to include workers in the federal Civilian Conservation Corps camps.

1933: The Legislature approves the construction of the State Library building.

1935: In November, a special session of the Legislature creates the State Capitol Reconstruction Commission to oversee the construction of the new State Capitol and State Library buildings.

1937: In March, the Legislature appropriates $550,000 for the State Library project, with $450,000 available from the WPA.

1942: “Ask Your State Librarian,” a weekly radio program, is broadcast over the state-owned radio station, KOAC in Corvallis.

1945: The Legislature makes budgetary provision for a State Archivist (at the recommendation of the Board of Trustees), which operates under the supervision of the State Librarian.

1946: David Duniway becomes Oregon’s first State Archivist.

1962: A Field Services Division is established to promote development of public library services and provide consultant services.

1965: Interstate Library Compact becomes law in Oregon, Washington and Idaho, which encourages and enables sharing of resources among these three states.
1967: OSL publishes Master Book Catalog, the first book catalog to be published by any state library in the nation. It contains a listing of all adult non-fiction acquired before November 1965 and was equivalent to a 1,200 drawer card catalog.

1969: Talking Book and Braille Services moves from Multnomah County Library to the Oregon State Library, Church Street annex in Salem.

1973: The Archives Division and archival services are transferred from the State Library to the Secretary of State’s office.

1976: Marion and 13th Street annex of the State Library become the second home of Talking Books.

1981: OSL suffers a severe cutback in services due to a 10 percent budget cut by the Governor and an additional 10 percent cut by the Legislature. Assistance to out-of-state residents and telephone reference service to individuals is curtailed.

1987: Oregon Intellectual Clearinghouse is established to track formally challenged library materials in Oregon.

1991: The Department of Administrative Services (DAS) requests funds from the Legislature as part of the 1991-93 capitol construction program. Some of these funds are used to carry out needed improvements to the State Library building.

The State Library changes its mission to move away from acting as a public library for the citizens of Oregon and towards becoming a special library that meets the information needs of state government employees.

Talking Books receives a Governor’s award for providing volunteer opportunities to disabled Oregonians.

1993: A Bill passes in the Legislature creating a State Library assessment of state agencies for library services. This assessment replaces General Fund money and Federal Library Services and Construction Act funds in the State Library budget.

Another bill passes creating the Children's Services Improvement Grant Program (later renamed the Ready to Read Grant Program) to improve services to children in public libraries.

1998: In September, renovation of the State Library begins.

2000: The renovation is completed.

Current organization
The State Library consists of the State Library Board, the State Librarian, Operations, Government Information and Library Services, Library Support and Development Services, and the Oregon Talking Book and Braille Library.

Library Board and Advisory Councils
The State Library Board consists of nine members from different areas throughout the state who are appointed by the governor to serve four-year terms. The board formulates general policies and adopts rules for State Library operation. The board proposes legislation, adopts long-range plans, reviews budgets, and designates libraries as depository libraries for state publications. The board also appoints the members of three different advisory councils.

State Librarian
The State Librarian is appointed by the governor and oversees subordinate divisions including Government Information and Library Services, Library Support and Development Services, and the Oregon Talking Book and Braille Library. As provided for by law, the State Librarian must be a graduate of an accredited (ALA) library school or possess the equivalent training and experience. The State Librarian selects personnel to carry out the functions and responsibilities of the State Library and assists local librarians and library boards in answering questions concerning library laws. The Office of the State Librarian is also required to deposit all money received by the State Library for services and materials rendered with the State Treasurer. The State Librarian also serves as secretary of the board.
Library divisions

Operations, including the State Librarian, is responsible for providing leadership and direction to the State Library by setting policies, determining the agency’s mission and strategic plans, and working effectively with constituency groups. Operations also provides the agency’s administrative management functions such as accounting, board support, financial management, facilities management, volunteer management, information technology management, communications, and other administrative support services.

Library Support and Development Service provides leadership, grants, and other assistance to improve library service for all Oregonians. The division is responsible for administering state and federal library grant programs, collecting and reporting library statistics, and providing consulting to libraries on topics ranging from technology to youth services.

The Oregon Talking Book and Braille Library is the Oregon Regional Library for the Library of Congress National Library Service for the blind and physically handicapped. Oregonians who are unable to read standard print because of a visual or physical disability are eligible for free library services. Books and magazines are available in audio format and in Braille. Reading materials and equipment are mailed to the reader and back to the State Library, postage free. Audio-books and magazines can also be downloaded for playback on portable digital players provided by the library.

Government Information and Library Service provides quality information services to assist state employees in the efficient performance of their jobs and in more effective decision making for state government. Specialized collections include federal and state government publications and a comprehensive collection of materials about Oregon. The library also provides permanent public access to Oregon state government documents and distributes them to selected Oregon libraries around the state through the Oregon Documents Depository Program.
