HB 3321 Report Draft Discussion

Presented by Third Horizon Strategies

Tym Rourke from Third Horizon Strategies presented a walkthrough of the purpose, methods, and structure of the draft HB 3321 report:

Statutory Requirements of HB 3321

The analysis needed to:

1. Develop an inventory of primary prevention programs statewide.
2. Conduct a financial analysis of how primary prevention services are funded, including state, federal, and local sources.
3. Produce observations and recommendations regarding gaps, inconsistencies, and fiscal policy opportunities.

Definition of Primary Prevention

- The report is explicitly based on the statute's definition of primary prevention, using the National Academy of Medicine's universal, selective, and indicated categories.
- This definition determined what "counted" as primary prevention in the analysis.

Scope Clarification

- Many programs contribute to youth resiliency or protective factors, but only those primarily focused on preventing substance use were included.
- This ensured clarity regarding true prevention-focused investments, acknowledging that these funds are limited statewide.

Methodology Summary

Tym outlined the comprehensive data-gathering process, noting its scale was “unlike any other” Third Horizon had conducted. The analysis drew on:

Surveys (4 total)

- Provider organizations
- School districts
- Prevention workforce
- Colleges and universities

These were developed and promoted with support from the ADPC and its committees.

Public Agency Records

- Review of more than 500 documents provided by state agencies.

Interviews & Focus Groups

- Conducted with state agencies, community-based prevention groups, members of the ADPC, and schools to better understand program practices and challenges.

National Literature Review

- Examined federal guidance, national best practices, and cross-state comparisons to contextualize Oregon's prevention system and identify potential improvement

Public Comment and Closing
