Home Inspector Advisory Committee Members Needed

The Oregon Construction Contractors Board (CCB) is accepting applications for two committee member positions on its Home Inspector Advisory Committee (HIAC). HIAC advises the CCB on home inspector education and testing.

The committee consists of five certified home inspectors, one public representative and the CCB chairperson or designee. Committee members are appointed to three-year terms by the CCB chairperson with advice from agency staff and consent of the board. Committee members are volunteers.

Currently, the CCB is accepting applications for one certified home inspector committee member and one public committee member. Meetings may be held up to four times a year in Salem.

“The CCB highly values the contributions made by our advisory committees, and appreciates the dedication and commitment of committee members,” says CCB Administrator Craig Smith.

People interested in serving on the committee can request an application by contacting the CCB’s education section at 503-378-4621, ext. 4081.

Applications must be received by October 1, 2010. Applicants will be notified in November of the appointments.

The CCB is a state agency, governed by a nine-member board, that regulates construction contractors and promotes a competitive business environment through education, contractor licensing, dispute resolution and law enforcement.
