

Water quality challenges from recreation and forest management on public lands and what's being done

Cara Farr,
USFS Acting National Burned Area
Emergency Response Coordinator

From the perspective of a soil scientist

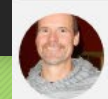

- Recreation
- Forest Management
- Fire Impacts

Oregon's beauty brings record crowds ... again

News | December 12, 2011

Scott Condon

scondon@aspentimes.com

Loved to Death: How Instagram Is Destroying Our Natural Wonders

Geotagging technology shows us where we are, no matter the destination. But the more we discover (and the more photos we take), the more we ruin.

By Molly McHugh | Nov 3, 2016, 8:30am EDT

Loving Our Lands To Death

Utah Public Radio

Science & Medicine

'People loving our lands to death': CPW's plan encourages responsible recreation outdoors

Recreation Impacts

Outside

← LOST ARTS

How to Poop Anywhere Outside

From rafting trips to big-wall climbs, here's how to do it just about anywhere outdoors

OHV Use
What you need to know

Land Management

Fire Suppression

Post-Fire Impacts

Cochiti Canyon Flood
Dixon's Apple Orchard

August 22, 2011

What can and what are we doing?

WILDFIRE IS COMING.
ARE YOU...
READY?

WATER TREATMENT

A diagram illustrating a four-stage water treatment process. Stage 1: A flask containing a blue liquid. Stage 2: A filter with yellow particles being removed. Stage 3: A tank containing brown sediment. Stage 4: A chemical structure diagram.

WILDFIRE IS COMING.
ARE YOU...
SET?

READY, SET, GO!

An illustration of a white house with a chimney, situated in a green field with a road. The background features a stylized, colorful landscape with red and yellow flames, suggesting a wildfire. There are also some trees and a small blue car on the road.