Oregon

It is reported that the Smith brothers of Grants Pass, Oregon, are constructing a road of about four miles to their recently acquired property in the Johnson Mountain district to give access to Powers and the Southern Pacific railroad. Ore shipments will not be started until spring. A bulldozer is being used in present development work. The ground being worked by the Smith brothers consists of three partially developed chrome and manganese claims which were purchased from Matt Coy and James Kellond of Marshfield, Oregon, and their associates.
