The Tambec Mining Company was organized recently to take over the Morning gold mine in Grant County about 75 miles from Baker, Oregon. Therrett Towles, 1301 Old National Bank Building, Spokane, Washington, is legal representative of the company, which is a Nevada incorporation. H. J. Evans, mining engineer of Neihart, Montana, has been in charge of operations for the new concern and Vernon A. Hoar, formerly of Neihart, is on the staff at Austin, Oregon. Operations will be suspended this fall for the duration of the war.

According to reports, the Morning mine in the Greenhorn district of Baker County, Oregon, has been taken over by the Lexington Mining Company, Donald C. Callahan of Wallace, Idaho, president. The Lexington company's original holdings are at Neihart, Montana, but it recently purchased an interest in the Callahan Consolidated Mines, Inc., of Idaho in an effort to enter the base metal mining field.

T. Ned Thomas of 1460 Second Street, Baker, Oregon, is prepared to purchase small lots of chrome ore, which he will ship with that of Anthony Brandenthaler of Whitney. Brandenthaler has two operations in Baker County, one known as the Parker-ville placers seven miles from Whitney; and a third operation on the Salmon River in Idaho.

The Kronz Corporation is erecting the second unit of its plant 17 miles south of Marshfield in Coos County, Oregon, and expects to begin production of chrome concentrates in September or October. The plant, started last spring, will handle 2,000 tons of black sand daily. O. Paul Lance is vice president and general manager, making headquarters at the company's western office, 208 Hub Building, Marshfield.
