

BLUE BELL PROSPECT (gold)

Galice' area

History:

"The Blue Bell prospect is situated 6 miles northwest of Galice, on a branch of Howard Creek, a mile above the Red Elephant. It was opened up some years ago by nearly 200 feet of tunnels. A number of tons of ore were mined, but none of it was shipped. The ore is chiefly pyrite, like that of the Red Elephant, but contains also some chalcopyrite and dark bluish scales of molybdenite. This prospect was not examined, though the neighboring greenstone was seen on the hill to the northeast, where it is so rich in pyroxene as to be practically a pyroxenite. Some of the ore samples from this locality are much sheared and slickensided. The molybdenite appears to be the latest deposit on the shearing planes but before the final movements."

Reference: Diller, 14:55 (quoted)