Sampling this property has thus far failed to turn up interesting values. The last sample I took there (from 4 to 8 feet deep) assayed .45% Ni, and is the highest obtained thus far. An attempt should probably be made to get some deeper samples in the area. We had a power auger on the property in about 1970 but their assay results and drilling success were very discouraging too.

I am sending this for your information only and don't believe there is reason to fill out an M.A.S. record on it at this time.

If I am able to get further information that looks at all encouraging, I'll let you know.
