3. 2016 Corrections Job Task Analysis
   Presented by Theresa King

   The 2016 Corrections Job Task Analysis (JTA) was presented to the Policy Committee for review. Some of the updates include the addition of two new critical and essential tasks based on industry trends and technological changes, making a total of 204, and four tasks were amended or reworded. Four new competencies were added to support the existing and new tasks for a total of 103, with one additional competency being amended. Primary competencies are now linked to Critical and Essential Tasks. Characteristics and Traits were identified that a corrections officer should possess that will make them successful in their position; these may impact minimum qualifications that an employer may require. The panel, with the assistance of the Center for Policing Excellence, engaged in a leading edge analysis to determine when and to what extent the competencies should be learned. Next steps include reviewing and updating both the Basic Corrections course curriculum and Field Training Manual.

7. Staff Updates

Linsay Hale reported:

Previously, the Corrections Policy Committee determined that Jason Holton’s certifications should not be revoked. Their recommendations were passed to the Board for final consideration. The Board requested the case be sent back to the Corrections Policy Committee for further review. The case will be re-presented at the August 9th Corrections Policy Committee meeting.

The concepts for the 2017 Legislative Session have been submitted. We have received permission from the Board to file three concepts on behalf of DPSST and the Board. The first concept relates to the fingerprint authorities. The second is would allow DPSST to suspend the certification of Armed Private Security providers who do not complete the annual requalification training. The final concept involves adding a voting public member to the Corrections, Police and Telecommunications Policy Committees.

DPSST is again working with the Oregonian on satisfying a large public records request.

With law enforcement agencies recovering from the recession and training new cadets in full tilt, the academy is working to catch up with cadets waiting to train. DPSST has asked legislative for more classes this year; including 911, police, corrections, and potentially a new parole/probation class.

This year’s Law Enforcement Memorial honored Deputy Gil Datan from Coos County. Deputy Datan was killed in the line of duty while patrolling forest roads in Coos County when the ATV he was riding fell on top of him. DPSST will be asking the Board for permission to add Seaside Sgt. Jason Goodding’s name to the wall at next year’s memorial.

The Board is happy to announce Jason Myers as the new Board Chair and Patricia Patrick-Joling as the new Vice Chair. There are several member changes to the Policy Committees as well. Matthew Frohnert is officially a member on Corrections Policy Committee as the Oregon Jail Command representative; Tami Jackson is terming out in July. Sheriff Matthew English will be joining CPC in the fall to replace Andy Long.

During the month of April, DPSST hosted the first Law Enforcement Career Fair for potential new law officers. Agencies from around the state showed up to promote their departments and filled the Hall of Heroes. The event is considered a success, bringing in a crowd total of over 2000.

The Criminal Justice Denial/Revocation workgroup has been actively meeting. There are a number of members that are on the Policy Committee that are actively participating. There has been great discussion thus far. Any recommendations from the workgroup will be presented to the Policy Committee by way of a rule change. Recommendations include the option to suspend certifications instead of just denying or revoking. Ethics maintenance training has been suggested as a requirement for all disciplines. There have also been recommendations on how cases are handled procedurally internally and how that information is shared with members of the Policy Committee and Board. During the next committee meeting you will see three rule changes recommended by this workgroup.

The workgroup discussion concerning the certification chart and how applications should be handled by DPSST staff is being wrapped up and you will see as a rule change in August looking at the certification track separating from its current method into two separate tracks. The first being basic, intermediate, and advanced; the second being basic, supervisory, and executive management. This allows younger officers with supervisory potential to forego the length of experience requirement and be directed towards a supervisory path at a much faster pace.

Andy Long was presented with a plaque of appreciation for his participation on Corrections Policy Committee.
