NATURE OF THE DECISION

Petitioner Oregon Pipeline Company LLC (OPC) appeals a Clatsop County Board of Commissioners’ (BOC’s) decision that denies its application for land use approvals for a natural gas pipeline.

FACTS

On October 9, 2009, OPC filed a consolidated application for three county land use permits needed to construct a 41-mile segment of the pipeline necessary to connect a proposed liquefied natural gas (LNG) terminal in the City of Warrenton with an interstate pipeline. The disputed 41-mile segment would begin at the City of Warrenton urban growth boundary, cross a number of county zoning districts, and end at the southeast corner of Clatsop County. OPC’s proposal is part of a larger project proposed by Oregon LNG, a company that is affiliated with OPC. Oregon LNG proposes to construct an LNG terminal in the City of Warrenton that, as originally proposed, would have off-loaded liquefied natural gas from ships, converted the liquefied natural gas into gas form, and then transmitted it via high pressure pipelines to users in this country.¹

A county hearings officer approved OPC’s application on August 23, 2010. OPC and pipeline opponents appealed that decision to the BOC. The BOC adopted a final decision approving the application on November 8, 2010, and pipeline opponents Columbia Riverkeeper and NW Property Rights Coalition appealed that decision to LUBA on November 24, 2010 (LUBA No.

1 2010-109). Under LUBA’s rules, the record in that appeal was due December
2 15, 2010. On December 13, 2010, the county moved for an extension of time 3 until January 14, 2011, to transmit the record to LUBA. In that motion, the 4 county stated that the reason for the requested extension was “due to an 5 unusually large and voluminous compilation of the Record.” In that motion, 6 the county also represented that no party objected to the motion. LUBA 7 granted the motion on December 14, 2010.

8 On January 12, 2011, three new commissioners were sworn into office as 9 Clatsop County Commissioners. On that date, with the three new 10 commissioners voting in favor, the BOC voted 4-1 to withdraw the November 11 8, 2010 decision for reconsideration, pursuant to ORS 197.830(13)(b).² On 12 January 13, 2011, the county filed a notice with LUBA that it was withdrawing 13 the November 8, 2010 decision for reconsideration. OPC opposed the motion, 14 but in a February 17, 2011 order, LUBA determined it had no basis for 15 rejecting the January 13, 2011 withdrawal. Under LUBA’s rules, the county’s

² ORS 197.830(13)(b) provides in part:

“At any time subsequent to the filing of a notice of intent and prior to the date set for filing the record, * * * the local government or state agency may withdraw its decision for purposes of reconsideration. If a local government or state agency withdraws an order for purposes of reconsideration, it shall, within such time as [LUBA] may allow, affirm, modify or reverse its decision. If the petitioner is dissatisfied with the local government or agency action after withdrawal for purposes of reconsideration, the petitioner may refile the notice of intent and the review shall proceed upon the revised order. An amended notice of intent shall not be required if the local government or state agency, on reconsideration, affirms the order or modifies the order with only minor changes.”

1 decision on reconsideration was due 90 days after the decision was withdrawn.
2 OAR 661-010-0021.³

3 On February 14, 2011, the county provided notice of a public hearing to 4 be held on March 9, 2011, at which the BOC would reconsider the November 5 8, 2010 decision. Five days before that hearing, on March 4, 2011, OPC filed a 6 petition for writ of mandamus under ORS 215.429 with the Clatsop County
7 Circuit Court, and the alternative writ issued on that date.⁴ Under ORS

³ OAR 661-010-0021 provides in part:

“(1) If a local government or state agency, pursuant to ORS 197.830(13)(b), withdraws a decision for the purposes of reconsideration, it shall file a notice of withdrawal with the Board on or before the date the record is due. A copy of the decision on reconsideration shall be filed with the Board within 90 days after the filing of the notice of withdrawal or within such other time as the Board may allow.

“(2) The filing of a notice of withdrawal under section (1) of this rule shall suspend proceedings on the appeal until a decision on reconsideration is filed with the Board, or the time designated therefor expires, unless otherwise ordered by the Board. If no decision on reconsideration is filed within the time designated therefor, the Board shall issue an order restarting the appeal.”

1 215.427, the county had 150 days from the date the application was deemed 2 complete to issue its final decision on OPC's application. The BOC's 3 November 8, 2010 decision was issued before that 150-day deadline expired.
4 OPC's legal theory in the circuit court mandamus proceeding was that, upon 5 the county's withdrawal of the November 8, 2010 decision on January 13, 2011 6 for reconsideration, the 150-day deadline began to run again and expired, 7 leaving OPC entitled to county approval of its application under ORS 8 215.429(5), unless the county or an intervenor established that such approval 9 would violate county land use laws under ORS 215.429(5). See n 4. On March 10 10, 2011, the county moved to dismiss OPC's circuit court mandamus 11 proceeding, and on March 18, 2011, the circuit court vacated the alternative 12 writ of mandamus.

13 Although OPC argued to the county that the county lacked jurisdiction to 14 reconsider its November 8, 2010 decision while the circuit court mandamus 15 proceeding was pending, the county proceeded with the March 9, 2011 public 16 hearing and adopted a preliminary decision to deny the application and 17 scheduled a meeting for March 30, 2011, to adopt a final written decision. On 18 March 21, 2011, OPC filed a petition for writ of mandamus with the Oregon 19 Supreme Court, and the Supreme Court issued a peremptory writ on March 29, 20 2011. In the peremptory writ, the Supreme Court ordered the circuit court to 21 continue the ORS 215.429 mandamus proceeding and ordered the county to 22 cease action on its reconsideration of the November 8, 2010 decision until the 23 circuit court completed adjudication of the ORS 215.429 mandamus 24 proceeding.

25 The circuit court entered a judgment dismissing the ORS 215.429 writ of 26 mandamus on June 6, 2011. OPC appealed that judgment, and the Court of

1 Appeals affirmed the judgment on October 24, 2012. State ex rel Oregon
2 Pipeline Co., LLC v. Clatsop County, 253 Or App 138, 288 P3d 1024 (2012).
3 OPC petitioned for Supreme Court review of the Court of Appeals’ decision, 4 and the Supreme Court denied review on March 28, 2013. On August 29, 5 2013, LUBA issued an order giving the county 90 days to complete its 6 deliberations on the withdrawn November 8, 2010 decision and file its decision 7 on reconsideration. On October 9, 2013, the BOC held a public hearing and at 8 the end of the hearing voted to deny the application. On October 16, 2013, the 9 BOC adopted a resolution and order that made its decision on reconsideration 10 final. Record A1-A396. LUBA received the decision on reconsideration on 11 October 18, 2013.

12 Under ORS 197.830(13)(b) and OAR 661-010-0021(5), petitioners 13 Columbia Riverkeeper and NW Property Rights Coalition were entitled to 14 refile their notice of intent to appeal or file an amended notice of intent to 15 appeal in LUBA No. 2010-109, within 21 days after LUBA received the 16 county’s decision on reconsideration on October 18, 2013. See ns 2 and 3.
17 Petitioners Columbia Riverkeeper’s and NW Property Rights Coalition’s notice
18 of intent to appeal in LUBA No. 2010-109 was not refiled. Petitioners also did 19 not file an amended notice of intent to appeal, presumably because those 20 petitioners do not oppose the county’s October 16, 2013 decision on 21 reconsideration.⁵ On November 5, 2013, OPC filed its notice of intent to

⁵ OAR 661-010-0021(5)(e) provides that if a notice of intent to appeal is not refiled or an amended notice of intent to appeal is not filed by petitioner within the 21 day deadline established by OAR 661-010-0021(5) “the appeal will be dismissed.” No party moved to dismiss LUBA No. 2010-109. In a separate final opinion and order issued this date, we dismiss LUBA No. 2010-109.

2 NW Property Rights Coalition have intervened on the side of respondent in this 3 appeal.

4 FIRST ASSIGNMENT OF ERROR

5 Under ORS 215.427(1), the county had 150 days after OPC’s application 6 was deemed complete to issue its final decision on that application.⁶ As noted 7 above, the BOC’s November 8, 2010 decision complied with that ORS 8 215.427(1) 150-day deadline.

9 Under ORS 197.835(10)(a), LUBA is directed to reverse a decision that 10 denies an application for development approval and order a local government 11 to approve the application where LUBA finds “that the local government’s 12 action was for the purpose of avoiding the requirements of ORS 215.427 or 13 227.178.” (Emphasis added.)⁷ OPC contends the county’s action on December 14 13, 2010, in seeking to extend the deadline for filing the record in LUBA No.

⁶ ORS 215.427(1) provides in relevant part that “[t]he governing body of a county or its designee shall take final action on * * * applications for a permit * * *, including resolution of all appeals under ORS 215.422, within 150 days after the application is deemed complete * * *.”

⁷ The relevant text of ORS 197.835(10)(a) is set out below:

“(10)(a) The board shall reverse a local government decision and order the local government to grant approval of an application for development denied by the local government if the board finds:

“(B) That the local government’s action was for the purpose of avoiding the requirements of ORS 215.427 or 227.178.”

1 2010-109 and its decision on January 13, 2011 to withdraw its decision for 2 reconsideration both qualify as an action that was taken to avoid the 150-day 3 deadline established by ORS 215.427(1). OPC argues LUBA should therefore 4 reverse the BOC’s subsequent October 16, 2013 decision that denied its 5 application, which is the decision that is the subject of this appeal, and order 6 the county to approve the application under ORS 197.835(10)(a).⁸

7 On one point, we agree with OPC. The county contends that the word 8 “action” in ORS 197.835(10)(a)(B) refers only to a decision to deny an 9 application for development permit approval. See n 7. The county argues that 10 petitioner does not contend that the October 16, 2013 decision to deny the 11 application was an “action [taken] for the purpose of avoiding the requirements 12 of ORS 215.427.” Respondent’s Response Brief 6 n1. The county contends 13 that neither the December 13, 2010 motion to extend the deadline for 14 transmitting the record to LUBA nor the January 13, 2011 withdrawal for 15 reconsideration is a decision that denies an application for a development 16 permit approval, and for that reason alone ORS 197.835(10)(a) simply does not 17 apply in this case.

18 We agree with OPC that the word “action” could encompass 19 interlocutory actions that lead to a decision to deny an application for permit 20 approval, and the word “action” is not limited to the final act of adopting a 21 decision that denies permit approval. Therefore, if either the decision to seek 22 an extension of the deadline for filing the record in the prior appeal or the 23 decision to withdraw the November 8, 2010 decision for reconsideration is

1 accurately characterized as an “action [taken] for the purpose of avoiding the 2 requirements of ORS 215.427,” OPC is entitled to the reversal of a resulting 3 decision to deny the permit and the relief that is specified in ORS 4 197.835(10)(a).

5 However, we reject OPC’s contention that either of those actions is 6 accurately characterized as an “action [taken] for the purpose of avoiding the 7 requirements of ORS 215.427[.]” The Court of Appeals reasoning in State ex
8 rel Pipeline clearly supports the county’s position that neither of those actions 9 constitutes an “action [taken] for the purpose of avoiding the requirements of 10 ORS 215.427[.]”

11 There is arguably some tension between the legislature’s decision to 12 establish a 150-day deadline in ORS 215.427(1) for counties to adopt final 13 decisions on development permit applications, and the legislature’s separate 14 decision in ORS 197.830(13)(b) to allow local governments an unqualified 15 right to withdraw decisions (including permit approval or denial decisions) for 16 reconsideration after they are appealed to LUBA, so long as the withdrawal is 17 accomplished before the deadline for transmitting the record expires. If a local 18 government is entitled to take the full 150 days allowed by ORS 215.427(1) to 19 render its initial decision on an application for development permit approval, 20 and then withdraw the decision in the event of an appeal and take the full 90
21 days allowed by ORS 197.830(13)(b) and OAR 661-010-0021(1) to reconsider 22 the withdrawn decision, it is certainly possible to argue the 150-day deadline 23 for a county’s “final action” in ORS 215.427(1) effectively becomes a 240-day 24 deadline in that circumstance. OPC apparently argued to the Court of Appeals 25 that the “final action” that is required by ORS 215.427(1) to be taken within 26 150 days after the application is deemed complete also encompasses any final

1 action on a decision that is withdrawn for reconsideration under ORS 2 197.830(13)(b) and OAR 661-010-0021. Under that view of the statutes and 3 LUBA’s rule, a county would only be entitled to the full 90 days that is 4 authorized by ORS 197.830(13)(b) and OAR 661-010-0021, if the county
5 rendered its initial decision that led to the LUBA appeal in 60 days, leaving 90 6 days for withdrawal and reconsideration. The Court of Appeals flatly rejected 7 OPC’s argument that the ORS 197.830(13)(b) and OAR 661-010-0021
8 reconsideration process is also subject to the ORS 215.427(1) 150 day deadline 9 for final action:

10 “[OPC]’s argument is not persuasive. * * * [H]ere, the county did 11 not fail to comply with the time limits prescribed by the mandamus 12 statute [ORS 215.427(1)]. As explained, the county took ‘final 13 action’ within the 150–day time limit; the circumstance that 14 LUBA review of that decision, including the withdrawal and 15 reconsideration process set out in ORS 197.830(13)(b), was 16 available thereafter does not alter that conclusion.

17 “* * * * *

18 “LUBA’s administrative rule, OAR 661–010–0021, implements its 19 jurisdictional authority under ORS 197.830(13)(b) over the 20 withdrawal and reconsideration process.[⁹] * * *

21 “The rule imposes safeguards against indefinite delay or 22 obstruction in the withdrawal and reconsideration process by 23 authorizing LUBA to ‘restart[] the appeal’ if the local government 24 fails to file a decision on reconsideration within the time limit 25 established by LUBA. The rule thus contemplates a monolithic 26 process in which an appeal from an initial final decision remains 27 in suspense during the reconsideration process. If the local 28 government fails to issue a decision on reconsideration within 90

⁹ See n 3.

1 days or such other time as LUBA may allow, the appeal is to 2 proceed. * * *.” 253 Or App at 147-49.

3 In short, the Court of Appeals concluded that when the county rendered 4 its initial decision on OPC’s application, OPC received the “final action” 5 within 150 days after the application was deemed complete that it was entitled 6 to under ORS 215.427(1). The Court of Appeals concluded the fact that there 7 could be further delay to resolve a LUBA appeal of that decision, and 8 additional delay if the county withdrew that decision for reconsideration, does 9 not alter its conclusion that the county’s initial decision on November 8, 2010 10 gave OPC the final action on the permit application that it was entitled to 11 within the deadline specified in ORS 215.427(1). The additional delay is 12 authorized by and governed by different statutes and LUBA’s rules. The Court 13 of Appeals concluded the additional delay that was caused when the November 14 8, 2010 decision was appealed to LUBA and withdrawn for reconsideration 15 was not subject to the 150-day deadline specified in ORS 215.427(1), which 16 only applies to the November 8, 2010 decision that was appealed to LUBA.

17 Because OPC received the final action within 150 days after its 18 application was deemed complete that it was entitled to under ORS 215.427(1), 19 it necessarily follows that neither the action the county subsequently took to 20 seek an extension of the deadline for filing the record nor the action it took to 21 withdraw the decision for reconsideration can be accurately characterized as an 22 “action [taken] for the purpose of avoiding the requirements of ORS 23 215.427[.]” Both of those actions may have prolonged the uncertainty OPC 24 may otherwise have avoided if the November 8, 2010 decision had not been 25 appealed to LUBA, but those actions were not taken “for the purpose of 26 avoiding the requirements of ORS 215.427(1)[.]” At most, they were actions

1 taken to take advantage of the statutory right the county is granted by ORS
2 197.830(13)(b) and OAR 661-010-0021 to withdraw its November 8, 2010
3 decision for reconsideration. Taking an action in furtherance of that statutory 4 right is not accurately characterized as an action taken “for the purpose of 5 avoiding” the county’s separate obligation under ORS 215.427(1).

6 Finally, OPC makes two additional arguments under the first assignment 7 of error that we address briefly. First, OPC suggests that the real reason the 8 county moved for an extension of time to file the record on December 13, 2010, 9 was to allow time for the recently elected commissioners to be seated as county 10 commissioners, and that the county and its attorney immediately began 11 exploring that possibility after the extension was granted. In retrospect, the 12 December 13, 2010 motion to extend the deadline for transmitting the record 13 until January 14, 2011, a date two days after the new county commissioners 14 would take office, would be consistent with a county intent to allow the new 15 BOC to take action to withdraw the decision for reconsideration. The fact that 16 the record shows the county was exploring its options regarding withdrawal of 17 the decision for reconsideration later in December 2010 also makes it clear that 18 at least by then the county was considering the possibility of withdrawing the 19 decision for reconsideration. But there was no dispute in LUBA No. 2010-109 20 that the record was 11,754 pages long and that the county experienced a staff 21 shortage when the development services manager left county employment on 22 November 12, 2010. Compiling and transmitting a record of that size could 23 easily take more than the 21 days authorized by our rules. In our February 17, 24 2011 Order in LUBA No. 2010-109, we concluded that the record was not 25 sufficient to establish that the county’s motive in seeking the record extension 26 on December 13, 2010, was something other than what the county represented

1 in its motion. The record in this appeal similarly fails to establish that the 2 county filed the December 13, 2010 motion, not to allow adequate time to 3 compile and transmit an 11,754 page record, but rather to allow time for the 4 new BOC to vote to withdraw the November 8, 2010 decision for 5 reconsideration. Moreover, even if the record did establish that the county was 6 not entirely forthcoming about its motives in seeking the extension of time to 7 file the record, at most that might provide a basis for concluding that LUBA 8 erred in its February 17, 2011 Order in LUBA No. 2010-109 that the county
9 must be allowed to withdraw its decision under ORS 197.830(13)(b) and OAR 10 661-010-0021. It would not convert that request for an extension of time to 11 transmit the record into an action taken “for the purpose of avoiding the 12 requirements of ORS 215.427(1)[,]” since the requirements of ORS 215.427 13 had already been satisfied on November 8, 2010, well before the December 13, 14 2010 motion was filed.

15 OPC also argues that under ORS 197.830(13)(b), the county is limited to 16 correcting any legal defects there might be in the November 8, 2010 decision, 17 and the statute is not available to allow a new BOC to adopt an entirely new 18 decision because it disagreed politically with the decision of the prior BOC.
19 Petition for Review 13-16.

20 We address OPC’s contention that the new members of the BOC were 21 biased and should not have participated in reconsideration of the November 8, 22 2010 decision under the second assignment of error below. But putting aside 23 the bias question, we do not see the limit in ORS 197.830(13)(b) that petitioner
24 argues is present in the statute. As relevant, the statute simply provides that a 25 county “may withdraw its decision for reconsideration,” and if it withdraws the 26 decision, it may “affirm, modify or reverse its decision.” Petitioner seems to 1 take the position that under these words in ORS 197.830(13)(b), the county is 2 limited to making any changes to the November 8, 2010 decision that it 3 believed were necessary for the county to be able to successfully defend that 4 decision.

5 We do not read the statute as narrowly as petitioner. There is certainly 6 no language in the statute that supports OPC’s contention that it limits the 7 county to correcting perceived errors in the withdrawn decision so that the 8 originally adopted decision can be defended at LUBA. One of the options ORS 9 197.830(13)(b) expressly gives the county is to “reverse” the withdrawn 10 decision. An accurate description of the county’s October 16, 2013 decision is 11 that it reversed the November 8, 2010 decision and adopted a new decision to 12 deny the application in its place. We do not agree that the county exceeded its 13 authority under ORS 197.830(13)(b) in adopting its decision on 14 reconsideration.

15 The first assignment of error is denied.

16 SECOND ASSIGNMENT OF ERROR

17 The legal requirement that quasi-judicial land use decision makers must 18 be “impartial” was first set out explicitly in Fasano v. Washington Co. Comm., 19 264 Or 574, 588, 507 P2d 23 (1973), and the nature and scope of that right has 20 been clarified in a number of cases over the 41 years since that decision.
21 Petitioner contends that three of the members of the BOC are biased in this 22 matter, and prejudged the application, and therefore were not “impartial” and 23 should not have participated in the decision to withdraw the county’s first 24 decision for reconsideration or the county’s subsequent decision to deny the 25 application. We first examine the Fasano impartiality requirement, before 26 discussing the actions of the three county commissioners and determining

1 whether those actions are such that their claims to be impartial in this matter 2 are not credible.

3 A. The Fasano Requirement that Quasi-Judicial Land Use
4 Decision Makers be Impartial

5 In its 1973 decision, the Oregon Supreme Court identified a number of 6 procedural rights that parties in a quasi-judicial land use proceeding are entitled 7 to. One of those rights is the right to “a tribunal which is impartial in the 8 matter—i.e., having no pre-hearing or ex parte contacts concerning the 9 question at issue * * *.” Subsequent cases have established that despite the 10 above language in Fasano, ex parte contacts do not necessarily mean a decision 11 maker is partial. Tierney v. Duris, Pay Less Properties, 21 Or App 613, 629, 12 536 P2d 435 (1975). Additional factors, other than ex parte contacts, also can 13 destroy the required impartiality. 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Wasco Co. Court, 14 304 Or 76, 81, 742 P2d 39 (1987). The correct inquiry is “whether the 15 evidence shows that the tribunal or its members were biased.” Neuberger v.

17 1. Eastgate Theatre v. Bd. Of County Comm’s, 37 Or App
18 745, 754, 588 P2d 640 (1978)

19 The Court of Appeals decision in Eastgate Theatre identified several 20 important principles that have shaped LUBA’s approach in resolving bias 21 claims. That case concerned an application for a comprehensive plan map 22 amendment where three votes of the five-member board of county 23 commissioners in favor of a motion was required to act. Two of the 24 commissioners disqualified themselves as biased.¹⁰ The board of

¹⁰ One of the commissioners was chair of a community planning organization that had strongly supported the proposed amendment. The

1 commissioners then split 2-1, with the result that there was no decision and a 2 conflict between the comprehensive plan map and zoning map designations for 3 the property at issue remained unresolved.

4 In remanding the decision to the county, the Court of Appeals made a 5 number of points, two of which are particularly relevant in this appeal. First, 6 the court observed that county commissioners, in their quasi-judicial capacity, 7 are similar to but not the same as judicial branch judges. They are not as easily 8 replaced as judges in the event of bias, so that nonparticipation can prevent a 9 decision on the merits, as it had in Eastgate. Therefore, nonparticipation by a 10 county commissioner is a “drastic step.” 37 Or App at 751. The court 11 observed that unlike a judge, a county commissioner is not expected to be 12 neutral, rather “[h]e is elected because of his political predisposition * * *.” 37
13 Or App 752. Similarly, in rejecting arguments that county commissioners 14 should be held to an “appearance of fairness” standard, the Oregon Supreme 15 Court explained its view of the different roles served by county commissioners 16 and judges:

17 “[County commissioners] are politically elected to positions that 18 do not separate legislative from executive and judicial power on commissioner stated that he believed it was “obvious” that the amendment should be approved and that he was “afraid [he] would become an advocate for that use rather than a judicial officer.” 37 Or App at 748 n 2. He also stated that he “adamantly expressed [his] views” in support of the proposal at the community planning organization meeting and that “those views have not changed * * *.”

The other commissioner was a director of the Metropolitan Service District, which was interested in acquiring the subject property for a solid waste transfer station. The other commissioner stated “as the matter focused more and more closely upon [the Metropolitan Service District] involvement with the site, [the other commissioner] felt he had to abstain.” 37 Or App at 748 n 3.

1 the state or federal model; characteristically they combine
2 lawmaking with administration that is sometimes executive and 3 sometimes adjudicative. The combination leaves little room to 4 demand that an elected board member who actively pursues a
5 particular view of the community’s interest in his policymaking
6 role must maintain an appearance of having no such view when 7 the decision is to be made by an adjudicatory procedure. Also, the 8 members of most governing bodies in this state serve part-time 9 and without pay, making their livings from the ordinary pursuits 10 and private transactions of their communities. Restrictions on 11 permissible business activities and sources of outside income 12 imposed on judges for the sake of appearance do not apply by 13 analogy to such board members.” 304 Or at 82-83.

14 In sum, while bias can be disqualifying, some bias on the part of county 15 commissioners is both unavoidable and expected, even if that bias might be 16 disqualifying for a judicial branch judge.

17 The second relevant point the court made was to emphasize the Supreme 18 Court’s characterization of the danger that the Fasano impartiality requirement 19 is intended to address—“the dangers of the almost irresistible pressures that 20 can be asserted by private economic interests on local government.’ 264 Or at 21 588.” The court concluded that “official involvement in community planning 22 and related governmental activities * * * are not of the kind [of interests] which 23 Fasano was intended to guard against.”

24 On its face, Eastgate sets a very high bar for disqualification of a county 25 commissioner for bias.¹¹ In a 1981 Attorney General Opinion that relied ¹¹ Eastgate is probably at least partially explained by the fact that nonparticipation in that case did not ensure an impartial decision maker; it prevented a decision.

“The abstention in this case did not prevent partiality; instead, it prevented the decision itself. Fasano cannot be applied so

1 heavily on Eastgate, the Attorney General observed that where a person 2 becomes a member of a tribunal, and that new tribunal member earlier 3 participated as an advocate before the same tribunal on the same matter he or 4 she is asked to decide as a new member of the tribunal, that person should 5 normally not participate in that matter. 41 Or Op Atty Gen 490, ___ (Westlaw 6 page 11). But the Attorney General, relying largely on Eastgate, ultimately 7 concluded that where a new member of a local governing body was a member 8 of a church and had represented the church as a consultant in seeking land use 9 approval, his participation as a local government decision maker in the very 10 same matter was not a per se violation of the Fasano impartiality requirement.

11 “* * * Oregon courts will disqualify members of quasi-judicial 12 tribunals for bias, but * * * such a remedy is a drastic step to be 13 taken only where there is a clear showing of actual prejudice or 14 bias. Mere prior advocacy of a position for or against a land-use 15 application which will come before such a tribunal by a member of 16 the tribunal will not, per se, result in disqualification, at least 17 where the member’s advocacy was in behalf of another 18 governmental organization.” Id. at 11 (emphasis in original).

19 2. LUBA Cases

20 Despite the high bar set for disqualification under Eastgate, LUBA has 21 found in a number of cases, where recusal did not appear to prevent the local 22 governing body from making a decision, that the local government decision 23 maker’s claim that it could decide a matter impartially was not credible, given literally that the decision-making system is aborted because an official charged with the public duty of adjudication fears that his motivation might possibly be suspect. The * * * commissioners’ refusal to vote here effectively denied the petitioners their entitlement to any tribunal at all; if there is no tribunal, partiality and impartiality become irrelevant.”

1 the nature and extent of the actions of the decision maker in those cases. We 2 discuss those cases below, before turning to petitioners arguments regarding 3 the three commissioners.

4 a. *Halvorson Mason v. City of Depoe Bay, 39 Or 5 LUBA 702 (2001)

6 In Halvorson Mason, a real estate developer sought a business license 7 modification from the city to allow continued operation of a real estate sales 8 office within a PUD. Whether the real estate sales office had been constructed 9 legally was disputed. The city recorder denied the application, and that 10 decision was appealed to the city council.

11 With regard to a bias claim against one of the commissioners, the record 12 and extra-record evidence showed that one city councilor had engaged in a 13 long running personal dispute with the developer and homeowners association 14 over what he called “Tijuana street vendor-style sales tactics” at the sales office 15 and “scare tactics” to influence the homeowners association. 39 Or LUBA at 16 708-09 n 5. The councilor had also challenged the mayor’s impartiality and 17 asked that he consider recusing himself. Given the councilor’s ongoing 18 personal dispute and leadership role in opposing the same real estate sales 19 office that was the subject of the business license modification, LUBA 20 concluded his claim that he could be an impartial decision maker and decide 21 the case based strictly on its merits and the official record was not believable.
22 39 Or LUBA 711.

23 The key in our decision in Halvorson Mason v. City of Depoe Bay was 24 the personal animosity between the city councilor and the applicant and his 25 personal opposition to the real estate sales office, both before and after the 1 application to modify the business license had been submitted to the city for 2 review and approval.

3 b. Friends of Jacksonville v. City of Jacksonville, 42
4 Or LUBA 137 (2002), aff'd 183 Or App 581, 54
5 P3d 636 (2002)

6 Friends of Jacksonville is a case with a number of similarities to the 7 present case. A church whose existing facilities were too small to 8 accommodate the expanding congregation sought a conditional use permit to 9 construct an 18,000-square foot church. The planning commission voted to 10 deny the application, and the city council voted 4-3 to uphold the planning 11 commission’s denial. The city council decision was appealed to LUBA and 12 while that appeal was pending at LUBA two new city councilors were elected.
13 The city and the applicant filed a motion asking LUBA to remand the decision 14 to the city for further consideration without considering the merits of the 15 appeal, and LUBA granted the motion. Following that remand, the city council 16 voted to approve the application with the two newly elected councilors (both 17 members of the church) voting to approve the application. In the second appeal 18 to LUBA, LUBA first discussed its decision in Halvorson Mason and the 1981 19 Attorney General Opinion discussed above. LUBA then concluded that one of 20 the new city councilors had not been shown to be biased.

21 “[The first councilor], a member of the Presbyterian 22 Church, was quite open about her dilemma of being 23 in the middle. She was analytical and diplomatic in 24 her explanation of how difficult it was for her to make 25 the right decision. She explained that the only way 26 for her was to be honest, looking at every aspect of 27 the issue and then basing her decision on what her 28 conscience dictated.’

1 “In other statements, [the first councilor] stated that the existing 2 church facilities were inadequate, and that she was concerned 3 about the impact certain proposed conditions of approval would 4 have on church operations. For example, she opposed a proposal 5 to limit weddings and funerals to the old church, arguing that 6 some people may prefer to hold those services in a facility that 7 could seat more people. Nevertheless, when asked by the church’s 8 attorney whether she believed she could decide the matter on the 9 facts and the law before her, she indicated that she could do so.” 10 Friends of Jacksonville, 42 Or LUBA at 143 (record citation and 11 footnote omitted).

12 Citing Eastgate, LUBA concluded that whatever bias that councilor’s 13 actions and statements might show did not rise to a level that would render 14 implausible her contention that she could put that bias aside and decide the 15 case on its merits.

16 But LUBA reached a different conclusion regarding a second councilor.
17 That councilor had appeared before the planning commission as an advocate 18 for the application, prior to the city council’s first decision. In a candidates’ 19 forum before the city council election at which he was elected, the councilor 20 stated “he did not feel the need to be objective regarding the First Presbyterian 21 Church, and further stated that ‘we [the church] will fight this even if we have 22 to fight all the way to the Supreme Court.’” 42 Or LUBA at 144. Following 23 his election to the city council he voted to seek remand of the initial denial 24 decision. After doing so, he “told a reporter that he wanted to ‘bring it back to 25 the council and try to work out our differences on a local level,’ and that if 26 complaints regarding noise and traffic are dealt with, ‘the case might avoid 27 another trip [to] LUBA, this time on appeal from neighbors.’” Id. While the 28 remand proceedings were pending before the city council, the second councilor 29 signed a petition supporting the proposal and submitted a written document

1 that explained in detail why the second councilor believed the application 2 satisfied all legal requirements. Based on these actions, LUBA concluded the 3 second councilor was biased and should not have participated in the decision 4 on remand:

5 “We believe the totality of the circumstances demonstrate that [the 6 second councilor] believed he was elected on a mandate to support 7 the proposed siting of the church and that for him, the only 8 question was what conditions were necessary to mitigate the 9 impacts the church would cause. As a result, we agree with 10 petitioner that absent evidence that [the second councilor’s] 11 participation was necessary in order for the council to reach a 12 decision, [the second councilor] should have recused himself from 13 participating in the challenged decision.” 42 Or LUBA at 146.

14 As was the case in Halvorson Mason, the second councilor who was 15 found to be biased was personally involved in the matter that was before the 16 city council. Moreover, the second councilor in Friends of Jacksonville 17 arguably was an even clearer case of bias, since he also made statements that 18 showed he had already decided the application should be approved and stated 19 he did not feel that he needed to be objective in the matter.

20 c. Woodard v. City of Cottage Grove, 54 Or LUBA 176
21 (2007)

22 This appeal concerned city decisions that granted rezoning and master 23 plans for a speedway. The speedway was formerly a nonconforming use 24 located outside the city. But in 2003, the city annexed the speedway and 25 subsequently adopted the challenged rezoning and master plan decision.
26 Petitioners contended that the mayor and two city councilors were biased and 27 should not have participated in the decision.

28 The first councilor made statements in support of the raceway and spoke 29 in favor of the speedway at rallies, saying he “strongly supported” the raceway.

1 However, these statements were made a number of years earlier when the 2 county was considering whether the speedway qualified as a nonconforming 3 use, before the speedway was annexed and before the application for rezoning 4 and master plan had been submitted. LUBA dismissed these statements and 5 found they were “not particularly probative in determining” whether the first 6 council was biased in the subsequent rezoning and master plan proceedings. 54 7 Or LUBA at 181.

8 LUBA then considered statements the first councilor made while the 9 2003 annexation proposal was pending, and found they should be considered 10 because the annexation was sought in furtherance of the rezoning and master 11 plan. While the 2003 annexation was pending, the first councilor co-signed a 12 letter supporting a local business owner’s refusal to serve Kilmer (one of the 13 opponents and one of the petitioners in the LUBA appeal challenging the 14 rezoning and master plan) due to his opposition to the speedway and 15 suggesting the petitioner should move somewhere else. After the application 16 for rezoning and master plan approval had been filed, the first councilor 17 requested from the police department police logs detailing contacts by three of 18 the petitioners with the police. Some of those contact were complaints about 19 the speedway, others were unrelated to the speedway. The first councilor met 20 with several other councilors (including the second councilor discussed below) 21 and the second councilor requested that the city manager make those police 22 logs part of the city’s proceedings on the rezoning and master plan. Based on 23 all these actions, LUBA ultimately found the first councilor was biased and 24 concluded his statement that he could participate objectively was not 25 believable:

1 “[T]he record as a whole demonstrates [the first councilor’s]
2 animus toward the opponents to the application, in particular 3 petitioner Kilmer. It is significant that in seeking additional 4 evidence to submit into the record, [the first councilor] asked the 5 police chief for confidential information on three of the most vocal 6 opponents, including Kilmer, and not just general information on 7 noise complaints in the area. The police logs include personal 8 information, as well as a considerable amount of information on 9 police contacts with petitioners not related to noise complaints 10 regarding the speedway. As the city attorney commented, the 11 selective use of such police contact information on opponents to 12 the application is simply inflammatory, and [the first councilor’s] 13 apparent willingness to obtain and rely on that information is, in 14 our view, a strong indication of bias.

15 “In addition, the fact that [the first] councilor * * * co-signed a 16 letter during the 2003 speedway annexation proceeding personally 17 attacking Kilmer and urging him to leave the city is a further 18 indication of [the first councilor’s] animus toward Kilmer and the 19 opponents in general, and that that animus rendered him incapable 20 of deciding the rezoning and [master plan] applications in an 21 impartial manner. * * *” Woodard, 54 Or LUBA at 186.

22 With regard to the second councilor who instructed the city manager to 23 make the police logs available to the full city council, LUBA concluded “the 24 most obvious inference is that [the second] councilor * * * believed that 25 disclosure of the police logs would discredit the opponents in the eyes of the 26 city council and the public.” 54 Or LUBA at 188. Although LUBA said the 27 question was closer with the second councilor, his lead role in disseminating 28 the police logs showed “an impermissible degree of bias and animus toward 29 petitioners” such that he should have recused himself. Id.

30 Finally, with regard to the mayor, LUBA found that his role in 31 dissemination of the police logs was much more limited and LUBA found that 32 the mayor’s statements of support while the matter was before the county in

1 2002 were not sufficient by themselves to conclude that the mayor could not 2 decide the case based on its merits.

3 The two councilors who were found to be biased in Woodard took 4 actions that in LUBA's view clearly demonstrated a personal animosity against 5 the parties opposing the raceway, sufficient to conclude they were incapable of 6 deciding the rezoning and master plan applications impartially.

7 d. *Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Hood River, __ Or 8 LUBA __ (LUBA No. 2013-009, May 21, 2013)

9 In this case, Wal-Mart had been granted approval to construct a store in 10 the City of Hood River, but that approval had expired, and Wal-Mart sought a 11 determination from the city that it had a vested right to continue construction of 12 the approved store despite the approval's expiration. In its initial decision, the 13 city agreed with Wal-Mart, but in an appeal of that decision, LUBA remanded.
14 In the local proceedings that led to that first city decision, the planning 15 commission chair, citing her prior opposition to a different Wal-Mart store, 16 which was proposed to be sited near the city in Hood River County, announced 17 she would not participate in the city proceedings to determine if Wal-Mart had 18 a vested right to continue construction of its city store. The planning 19 commission chair then participated in the proceedings leading to the first 20 decision as an individual and opposed the application. The planning 21 commission chair was later appointed to fill a vacancy on the city council, and 22 when the matter returned to the city council following LUBA's remand, the 23 former planning commission chair (now a city councilor) again stated she 24 would not participate based on her prior opposition to the proposed Wal-Mart 25 in the county. The remaining city councilors deadlocked 3-3 on the vested

1 right question. Under the county charter, four votes are needed to take action, 2 and the 3-3 vote resulted in no action.

3 Wal-Mart v. City of Hood River is a complicated case, because LUBA 4 also considered the “rule of necessity” and concluded that a biased member of a 5 city council could vote on the matter, if her vote was needed to obtain the 6 fourth vote required under the city charter to take action on the application.
7 But for purposes of this appeal, the case simply stands for a relatively 8 straightforward principle. That is, where a decision maker has stepped down as 9 a decision maker citing potential bias and then proceeds to participate as a 10 party opposing that same application, before both the planning commission 11 when the decision maker was a planning commissioner and before the city 12 council, when that person was a member of the city council, that person may 13 not then claim to be unbiased and participate in the decision, unless the rule of 14 necessity is properly invoked.¹² LUBA found “[a] reasonable person would 15 simply not believe that an individual could go through the time and effort of 16 preparing and presenting opposition to an application for land use approval 17 before local bodies, and then abandon his or her role as an advocate and make 18 an unbiased decision on that same application.” Wal-Mart v. City of Hood 19 River, slip op 14.

20 There are some common themes in the four cases we describe above.
21 We list them below.

- 22 1. The Participation of the Biased Decision Maker was Not 23 Necessary for a Quorum or the Number of Votes
24 Required to Make a Decision to be Rendered. In three ¹² In Wal-Mart v. City of Hood River, LUBA concluded the rule of necessity had been invoked prematurely.

1 cases, recusal of the biased decision makers would not 2 prevent a decision from being rendered. LUBA remanded 3 in Wal-Mart v. City of Hood River, for the city to take 4 additional measures to reach a decision before determining 5 whether to invoke the rule of necessity. In the usual 6 situation this factor is probably best viewed as a factor that 7 makes non participation a more drastic measure because it 8 will deny an applicant a decision at all. As explain below, 9 this case is not the usual situation.

10 2. At Least Some of the Actions Were Taken by the Biased
11 Decision Maker as Part of the Same Matter the Biased
12 Decision Maker was Being Asked to Decide. In all four 13 cases, at least some of the actions were taken with regard to 14 the same matter the biased decision maker was asked to 15 decide. Actions taken in other related or similar matters 16 were not as important.

17 3. Strong Personal Feelings Regarding a Party. In all four 18 cases, with the possible exception of Wal-Mart v. City of 19 Hood River, the decision maker LUBA found to be biased 20 exhibited strong personal feelings toward the applicant or an 21 opponent (animosity or support) and the record suggested 22 that the person's decision making would be guided by those 23 strong feelings rather than the legal standards and evidence 24 in the record.

25 4. The Decision Maker Acted in a Personal Capacity. The 26 actions were taken by the decision maker personally, rather 27 than as a member of an organization or on behalf of an 28 organization.

29 B. The Three County Commissioners

30 The three county commissioners that petitioner contends are biased 31 against petitioner are commissioners Huhtala, Birkby, and Lee.

1 1. Commissioners Birkby and Lee

2 Petitioner’s contentions that commissioners Birkby and Lee are biased 3 are based solely on statements that they made during their campaigns for 4 county commissioner in 2010 and the fact that they voted to withdraw the 5 decision for reconsideration upon becoming county commissioners. When 6 asked if he had opposed LNG projects in the past, commissioner Birkby 7 answered that he had opposed a different proposal at Bradwood Landing, and 8 explained:

9 “My thinking basically comes from a global picture as opposed to 10 these individual projects that with the market price being 11 extremely down on natural gas that in the big picture of the world, 12 I saw no reason whatsoever for that resource to be imported into 13 this country.” Record A1609.

14 Petitioner cites commissioner Birkby’s plural reference to “projects” as 15 showing his opposition goes beyond the Bradwood Landing proposal.

16 Commissioner Lee was asked if he had stated opposition to OPC’s 17 proposal, and responded:

18 “During the campaign for the election for the Board of County 19 Commissioners last spring, I made public statements expressing 20 my serious concerns about LNG proposals and the previous 21 Board’s rulings, so the answer is yes.” Record A1610.

22 Commissioners Birkby’s and Lee’s statements express concerns about 23 the wisdom of LNG facilities generally and the prior BOC’s earlier approval 24 decision for the OPC pipeline specifically, but fall well short of the kinds of 25 actions that led LUBA to conclude in Friends of Jacksonville that one of the 26 city councilors “did not feel the need to be objective” and “believed he was 27 elected on a mandate to support the proposed siting of the church.” 42 Or 28 LUBA at 144 and 146. We believe isolated statements of concern or even

1 opposition to the BOC November 8, 2010 decision during their campaigns for 2 county commissioner are not a sufficient basis for questioning their 3 representations during the reconsideration proceeding that they could decide 4 the matter impartially. Rather, they are the kinds of actions that the Oregon 5 Supreme Court and Court of Appeals in 1000 Friends v. Wasco Co. Court and 6 Eastgate recognized are to be expected from elected officials that serve 7 executive, legislative and quasi-judicial functions. Those actions do not 8 amount to actions that are per se disqualifying bias without more.

9 Commissioners Birkby's and Lee's decisions one day after taking office 10 to vote to withdraw the decision for reconsideration makes the question much 11 closer, but even with that action, viewing all of commissioners Birkby's and 12 Lee's actions, we do not agree they demonstrate that they were biased against 13 petitioner.

14 2. Commissioner Huhtala

15 Commissioner Huhtala's actions go considerably beyond those of 16 commissioners Birkby and Lee. We consider those actions in some detail 17 below before attempting to reach a conclusion regarding his impartiality.

18 a. 2005 Campaign for Port Commissioner

19 In 2005, Huhtala campaigned for a position on the Port of Astoria. At 20 that time, Calpine LNG was seeking land use approvals for the LNG terminal 21 in Warrenton.¹³ An April 27, 2005 newspaper article attached as an appendix

¹³ We discuss Huhtala's appeal to LUBA of those land use approvals next. Calpine was the predecessor of Oregon LNG. As we noted earlier, Oregon LNG and OPC are affiliated companies. Calpine LNG secured a lease for the proposed site for the LNG terminal in Warrenton from the Port of Astoria,

1 to the petition for review describes candidate Huhtala and under “Issues and 2 Goals” states “oppose any LNG terminal in the Columbia River estuary.” 3 Petition for Review App 125. The article goes on to say “Huhtala who is 4 supporting fellow anti-LNG candidates * * * said that he hopes a new port 5 commission could take a stand against the Calpine lease.” The article also 6 attributes the following statement to Huhtala: “It could become the policy of 7 the Port of Astoria that we oppose the construction of a liquefied natural gas 8 facility anywhere in the Columbia River Estuary and direct staff to do 9 everything possible to make that happen * * *.” Id.

10 Huhtala’s Port of Astoria campaign statements, which were made over 11 nine years ago, are also the kind of community policy positions or statements 12 that the Court of Appeals and Supreme Court have indicated do not require 13 recusal, in and of themselves. We consider those statements, however, later in 14 considering the totality of Huhtala’s activities.

15 b. 2006 LUBA Appeal of the Warrenton LNG
16 Terminal

17 As noted earlier, OPC’s proposed 41-mile pipeline in Clatsop County is 18 part of the same project that would include the LNG terminal in the City of 19 Warrenton. Approximately nine years ago, an application was filed for 20 comprehensive plan and development code map and text amendments to 21 facilitate approval of that LNG terminal in the City of Warrenton on the East 22 Skipanon Peninsula. Commissioner Huhtala was one of three individual 23 petitioners, along with two organizations (People for Responsible Prosperity 24 and Columbia Riverkeeper) who opposed the proposal and appealed the which in turn had leased the land from the Oregon Department of State Lands.

We discuss Huhtala’s opposition to the Port’s lease later in this opinion.

1 proposal to LUBA. LUBA affirmed the decision, and the Court of Appeals 2 affirmed LUBA's decision without opinion. People for Responsible Prosperity
3 v. City of Warrenton, 52 Or LUBA 181, aff'd 208 Or App 495, 143 P3d 775 4 (2006).

5 The city proceedings regarding the Oregon LNG terminal in Warrenton 6 and the county proceedings regarding OPC's application for permits for the 7 Clatsop County section of the pipeline necessary to make the terminal 8 operational are technically different proceedings before different local 9 governments. However, both the pipeline and the terminal are parts of the 10 same overall project and proposal. It is undisputed that Huhtala participated as 11 a party opponent in appeals to LUBA and the Court of appeals challenging 12 comprehensive plan and land use regulation amendments that were needed to 13 construct the Warrenton LNG terminal. If Huhtala had become a member of 14 the Warrenton City Council while those appeals were pending, he almost 15 certainly would not have been permitted to then claim to be unbiased and 16 participate as a decision maker, if those decisions had been remanded to the 17 Warrenton City Council for further action. That did not happen. But a land 18 use permit for a different part of the same proposed project has now been 19 requested and denied by the Clatsop County BOC with Huhtala participating as 20 a decision maker and voting against the proposal. The question is whether that 21 difference in the facts and posture of this case justifies a different conclusion 22 regarding Huhtala's ability to claim to be impartial. We return below to 23 Huhtala's participation in the 2006 appeal regarding Oregon LNG's terminal 24 after we consider his other actions.

1 c. 2009 Letter Regarding the Warrenton Terminal
2 Lease

3 The Oregon Department of State Lands leased the 92-acre Warrenton
4 site to Oregon LNG’s predecessor Calpine LNG for $38,000 per year. In a 5 November 6, 2009 letter to the Governor of Oregon, Huhtala, as Executive 6 Director of the Columbia River Business Alliance, took the position that the 7 annual lease payment should be significantly higher, based on comparable 8 leases for LNG terminals and other industrial uses. Record A1650-53.

9 We do not assign much significance to this letter, viewed in isolation. It 10 was sent in Huhtala’s capacity as executive director of the Columbia River 11 Business Alliance, rather than in his personal capacity, and on its face it is only 12 expressing concern that the state is not receiving full value for the land that 13 would be leased for Calpine LNG’s proposed Warrenton facility. Nevertheless, 14 we consider it as part of the totality of Huhtala’s activities in this matter.

15 d. 2009 LNG Public Protection Act

16 A 2009 newspaper article includes the following description of proposed 17 LNG legislation:

18 “The proposed ‘LNG Public Protection Act’ would allow state 19 land leases, water rights, or wetland fill permits only if the 20 Department of Energy determined there is a need for LNG, and the 21 bill would set standards for permitting of LNG facilities * * *.”
22 Petition for Review Appendix 123.

23 Huhtala, in his capacities as a resident and director of the Columbia River 24 Business Alliance praised a legislator who supported the proposed legislation 25 for “leadership on the LNG issue,” and was also quoted as saying:

26 “We support finding ways to protect the Columbia River and its 27 people because our businesses depend on the health of the River.”
28 Id.

1 We will consider the above statements concerning LNG related legislation as 2 part of the totality of Huhtala’s actions, but viewed in isolation they lend 3 almost no support for petitioner’s contention that Huhtala is biased in this 4 matter to a degree that he should have disqualified himself in this matter.

5 e. 2009 Campaign for House of Representatives

6 In 2009, Huhtala ran for the Oregon House of Representatives. In doing 7 so, Huhtala is quoted as having made the following statement about his 8 opponent:

9 “Unfortunately, Mr. Witt has been aiding and abetting LNG 10 speculators with their plans to bring foreign fossil fuels to Oregon 11 for shipment through massive pipelines to California. This is 12 intolerable.” Petition for Review Appendix 126.

13 As was the case with his statements about the 2009 proposed legislation, 14 we will consider the above statement as part of the totality of Huhtala’s actions.
15 But viewed in isolation, these statements are the kind of policy positions that 16 political candidates are expected to take and by themselves provide little or no 17 support for petitioner’s contention that Huhtala is biased to such a degree that 18 he should have disqualified himself in this matter.

19 f. Bradwood Landing Appeals

20 Huhtala, another individual, Columbia Riverkeeper, and Columbia River 21 Business Alliance and other organizations petitioned for LUBA review of a 22 Clatsop County decision approving comprehensive plan and zoning ordinance 23 amendments necessary to develop a different LNG facility at Bradwood 24 Landing. Based on the arguments advanced on behalf of the petitioners, LUBA 25 remanded. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 61 Or LUBA 96 (2010).
26 The applicant appealed, and Huhtala was among persons who intervened to 27 defend LUBA’s decision at the Court of Appeals, which affirmed LUBA’s

1 decision. Columbia Riverkeeper v. Clatsop County, 238 Or App 439, 243 P3d 2 82 (2010).

3 While the proposed Bradwood Landing LNG facility is an entirely 4 different proposal, we understand petitioner to contend that Huhtala’s 5 participation in that appeal is evidence of his consistent opposition to LNG 6 facilities. We agree with petitioner. But while that consistent opposition in 7 general, and opposition to the Bradwood proposal in particular, are relevant 8 considerations in determining whether Huhtala has disqualifying bias in this 9 proceeding concerning OPC’s pipeline proposal, that opposition by itself 10 would certainly not amount to disqualifying bias. We consider it, however, as 11 part of the totality of Huhtala’s actions.

12 g. 2010 Campaign for County Commissioner

13 Huhtala ran for one of three vacancies on the Clatsop County Board of 14 Commissioners in 2010. During that campaign, he wrote the following in a 15 letter to the Daily Astorian, concerning the proposed Bradwood Landing LNG 16 facility:

17 “It may not be time to celebrate victory in our struggle to stop 18 liquefied natural gas. But I give a cheer on behalf of the people of 19 the Lower Columbia when I heard that Oregon’s Department of 20 Environmental Quality refused to bow to Northstar’s demands 21 (‘Bradwood dealt triple permit blow,’ the Daily Astorian, Feb.

23 “* * * * *

24 “We’re getting closer to the point when these LNG projects will be 25 shut down. Then we can fully celebrate. In the meantime, let’s 26 take every opportunity to vote for leaders that will properly 27 represent us. And let’s give credit to agencies that do the right 28 thing.” Record A1654.

1 The Daily Astorian Newspaper gave the following account of an April 22, 2 2010 candidates' forum for the county commissioners candidates:

3 "Question No. 1 asked the candidates what their stance was on 4 building an LNG terminal in Clatsop County.

5 "Those in favor: One. Dunzer. Although he clarified, he thinks 6 the proposed Bradwood terminal is 'poorly designed.'

7 "Those opposed: Three. Huhtala, Birkby and Lee with Huhtala 8 proclaiming the projects a 'breathhtakingly bad idea.'

9 "Those on the fence: Three. Raichl, Hazen and Mushen, all 10 current county commissioners who said they could not take a 11 public stance, 'I have to obey the law,' Muchen said, while Hazen 12 said that because the matter is under adjudication it would not be 13 appropriate for him to offer an opinion." Record A1659.

14 We agree with petitioner that while the letter to the paper may have been 15 in response to actions with regard to the proposed Bradwood facility, it appears 16 to express broader opposition to LNG facilities generally. The statement at the 17 candidate forum attributed to Huhtala appears to have been directed at all LNG 18 proposals, including OPC's proposed pipeline. While we conclude that the 19 letter to the paper and the statements made at the candidates' forum both come 20 short of promising to vote with an anti-LNG bias and calling for voters to vote 21 for candidates with such a bias, the statements come fairly close to doing so.
22 The statements were made after the OPC application was submitted, while 23 OPC's application was pending before the Clatsop County Board of 24 Commissioners and appear to encompass OPC's proposal. That makes the 25 statements harder to dismiss as mere campaign expressions of a community 26 policy position that could be set aside in the event Huhtala was elected and 27 required to serve as a quasi-judicial decision maker on OPC's application.
28 While we do not agree that these statements, in and of themselves, are adequate

1 to show Huhtala has the kind of bias against OPC’s proposal or LNG proposals 2 in general that compel his recusal in this matter, they are sufficient to call his 3 ability to be an impartial quasi-judicial decision maker on OPC’s application 4 into question.

5 h. Columbia Riverkeeper and Columbia River
6 Business Alliance

7 Huhtala was executive director of Columbia River Business Alliance for 8 a number of years and was also a board member for Columbia Riverkeeper and 9 advisory board member with Columbia Riverkeeper. Both of those 10 organizations have been active opponents of LNG facilities in Columbia 11 County. On June 9, 2010, Columbia Riverkeeper submitted written testimony 12 to Clatsop County opposing OPC’s proposed pipeline, on behalf of itself, and a 13 number of individuals and organizations. While that June 9, 2010 testimony 14 was not submitted on behalf of Huhtala personally, it was submitted on behalf 15 of Columbia Riverkeeper and Columbia River Business Alliance. Huhtala 16 resigned his positions with Columbia Riverkeeper and Columbia River 17 Business Alliance after he was elected in May 2010, but Petitioner contends 18 Huhtala’s resignations from those organizations were not final when the June 19 9, 2010 testimony was submitted.

20 For two reasons, we do not assign a great deal of significance to the fact 21 that Huhtala held positions with Columbia Riverkeeper and Columbia River 22 Business Alliance during time periods when those organizations were involved 23 in appeals challenging the Warrenton LNG terminal, the proposed Bradwood 24 facility or even the OPC pipeline proposal. First, while Huhtala presumably 25 shared at least some of those organizations’ views, we cannot infer that he 26 entirely agreed with the opposing position taken in the June 9, 2010 letter even

1 if he was still a member of Columbia Riverkeeper and Columbia River 2 Business Alliance on that date. Second, even if he was in full agreement with 3 those organizations when he was a member, he took steps to resign from both 4 organizations in June 2010 after he was elected to the BOC. The fact that there 5 may have still been indications on webpages and other documents from those 6 organizations that Huhtala remained a member of the organizations after June 7 2010 is not enough to call into question Huhtala’s representation that he 8 resigned from those organizations in June 2010.

9 i. Conclusion

10 In Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. City of Central Point, 49 Or LUBA 697, 709-11 10 we described the obligation of local government officials regarding their 12 biases when sitting in a quasi-judicial setting.

13 “As we have explained on many occasions, local quasi-judicial 14 decision makers, who frequently are also elected officials, are not 15 expected to be entirely free of any bias. To the contrary, local 16 officials frequently are elected or appointed in part because they 17 favor or oppose certain types of development. Local decision 18 makers are only expected to (1) put whatever bias they may have 19 to the side when deciding individual permit applications and (2) 20 engage in the necessary fact finding and attempt to interpret and 21 apply the law to the facts as they find them so that the ultimate 22 decision is a reflection of their view of the facts and law rather 23 than a product of any positive or negative bias the decision maker 24 may bring to the process.” (Citations omitted; emphasis in 25 original.)

26 In Schneider v. Umatilla County, 13 Or LUBA 281 (1985) LUBA concluded 27 that “personal bias sufficiently strong to disqualify a public official must be 28 demonstrated in a clear and unmistakable manner.” LUBA has cited Schneider 29 in a number of subsequent decisions to require clear and unmistakable proof of 30 disqualifying actual bias. Woodard, 54 Or LUBA at 189; Carlsen v. City of

1 Portland, 36 Or 614, 628 (1999); St. Johns Neighborhood v. City of Portland,
2 34 Or LUBA 46, 55 (1998).

3 In responding to concerns that he could not participate in this matter 4 impartially as a decision maker, Huhtala made the following statement:

5 “It is clear that I’ve personally expressed many concerns about 6 many aspects of LNG transport. You know, as I mentioned, tanker 7 traffic, dredging issues, safety, the size of the facility in 8 Bradwood, the road conditions – some of the same issues the 9 applicant raised in the Bradwood situation. My reasonable 10 concerns don’t cause me to prejudge the situation. This is a 11 complex application. There is nothing that prevents me from 12 assessing the facts under review. I have the ability to set aside any 13 personal views and to evaluate, discuss and vote on matters of 14 fact. Of course I expressed personal opinions while campaigning.
15 Citizens expect politicians to have opinions, but past association 16 or articulation does not predict future decisions that will be based 17 on the record of facts. I enter this hearing without preconception.
18 I understand my responsibility in a quasi-judicial setting. I take it 19 seriously that I need to remain unbiased during this process and set 20 aside personal views. We all have personal views. One thing that 21 I have been elected to do i[s] sit impartially in a quasi-judicial 22 setting and make decisions based upon the facts.” Record A1429.

23 In his statement quoted above, commissioner Huhtala represents that he can put 24 his biases aside and participate as an impartial decision maker, consistent with 25 the general expectations of quasi-judicial decision makers we described in Wal- 26 Mart v. City of Central Point. Thus, unlike the city councilor in Friends of 27 Jacksonville who never claimed he could make an unbiased decision, Huhtala 28 claimed that he could. The issue for us in this appeal is whether that statement 29 is credible, given the totality of Huhtala’s actions in opposition to LNG 30 facilities over a period of a number of years.

31 Most of the actions taken by Huhtala and described above simply show 32 that as a matter of policy, Huhtala has been a strong and consistent opponent of 1 LNG development in Clatsop County in a number of settings and has been a 2 member of organizations that similarly oppose LNG development.

3 Nevertheless, of the four themes/factors in our cases finding bias that we 4 identified earlier, one is clearly present, and two are arguably present. As we 5 explain in more detail below, Huhtala’s participation was not only unnecessary 6 for a final county decision in this matter, the manner in which that participation 7 came about is the strongest evidence of bias in our view. Two other 8 themes/factors that we set out earlier are at least arguably implicated “At Least 9 Some of the Actions Were Taken by the Biased Decision Maker as Part of the 10 Same Matter the Biased Decision Maker was Being Asked to Decide” and “The 11 Decision Maker Acted in a Personal Capacity.” We first consider those 12 arguably present factors.

13 Huhtala participated in his personal capacity as a party opponent in the 14 LUBA appeal of legislative land use decisions that would be needed to approve 15 Oregon LNG’s Warrenton terminal. It is true that it is possible to argue that it 16 was not the “same matter” as the matter that was before the BOC here, a 17 pipeline to connect that facility with the interstate grid, the pipeline. However, 18 the terminal and the pipeline are but different parts of the same larger proposal 19 and therefore arguably are the same matter for purposes of the Fasano 20 impartiality requirement. As we concluded in Wal-Mart Stores v. City of Hood 21 River, if the Fasano right to an impartial decision maker means anything, it 22 does not permit a person to change horses in midstream by beginning as a party 23 opponent to an application for land use approval and then changing roles later 24 to participate as a decision maker regarding the same application.¹⁴

¹⁴ Our reasoning in Wal-Mart Stores v. City of Hood River is set out below:

1 But the situation in this case is admittedly somewhat different, since the 2 proposed facility affects many jurisdictions necessitating multiple land use 3 applications and the LNG terminal that Huhtala personally opposed is only part 4 of the larger LNG facility. Furthermore, the Warrenton facility was approved 5 by the City of Warrenton, not Clatsop County. And finally, eight years has 6 passed since that city decision was rendered. But there is simply no reason to 7 believe Huhtala’s opposition to the LNG facility in Warrenton that led him to 8 participate as a petitioner at LUBA challenging the Warrenton LNG facility 9 does not extend to OPC’s pipeline, which with other pipeline segments is 10 necessary to make the Warrenton LNG facility operational. And there is 11 certainly nothing in Huhtala’s actions in the past eight years that would support 12 a conclusion that he feels any differently today about the larger LNG project

“While the focus below seems to have been McBride’s actions in opposition to the county Super Store application rather than her actions in opposition to the application that led to this appeal, her actions regarding the Super Store, alone, likely would not have been enough to require that she disqualify herself as a planning commissioner or city councilor. That she opposed the county Super Store does not necessarily mean she could not muster the impartiality required to judge a different application to expand the existing city Wal-Mart store. However, once she decided to recuse herself, she took the additional steps of advocating against the application to expand the city Wal-Mart store. In fact, she went so far as to reiterate to the other city councilors the legal arguments in the memorandum that she submitted as an advocate against the application, immediately before casting the deciding vote that was consistent with the legal arguments in her legal memorandum. If the Fasano requirement for impartiality means anything, it does not permit a decision maker to claim to be a neutral or unbiased decision maker in that circumstance.” Slip op at 14-15.

1 than he did eight years ago when he was a petitioner at LUBA opposing the 2 Warrenton LNG terminal.¹⁵ Nevertheless, the circumstances in this appeal and 3 the circumstances in Wal-Mart v. City of Hood River are sufficiently different 4 that it might be possible to overlook that prior personal participation in the 5 appeal of the closely related decisions concerning the terminal, and conclude 6 that Huhtala could nevertheless now participate as an impartial decision maker 7 in an application for permits for the pipeline that is needed to make that 8 terminal operational, if his participation in the appeal of the Warrenton LNG 9 facility and his other actions prior to becoming a county commissioner were the 10 only evidence of bias. Stated differently, if Huhtala had been a member of the 11 BOC on November 8, 2010, and made the statement he made in this case and 12 voted to deny the application, we likely would conclude that the evidence is not 13 strong enough to conclude that, despite his statement to the contrary, the 14 evidence in the record is such that it demonstrates in a clear and unmistakable 15 manner that Huhtala cannot be objective in this matter. But Huhtala was not a 16 member of the BOC on November 8, 2010.

17 As we explained earlier, the factor that seems to have most heavily 18 influenced the Court of Appeals' analysis and conclusions in Eastgate was the 19 fact that without the participation of the nonparticipating commissioners in 20 Eastgate, there would be no decision at all. With no decision at all, there 21 would have been a stalemate in that case with inconsistent comprehensive plan 22 and zoning map designations and no way to reach a final resolution on the

1 merits. That factor is entirely absent here.¹⁶ As a matter of fact, the situation in 2 this appeal is exactly the opposite. A decision had already been rendered and 3 that final decision was pending on appeal to LUBA. One day after taking 4 office, Huhtala took affirmative action at the last possible moment to 5 participate where his participation was not required, effectively undoing an 6 already decided matter so that new proceedings could be conducted and a new 7 decision could be adopted.

8 When Huhtala took office on January 12, 2011, the BOC had already 9 rendered a final decision on November 8, 2010. That decision had been 10 appealed to LUBA, and had the LUBA appeal been allowed to continue, the 11 parties would have presented arguments and LUBA would have decided 12 whether the decision was legally flawed. Given that posture of the case, 13 Huhtala’s decision to vote to withdraw the decision and to deny the application 14 were not necessary, either to render a final decision in this matter or to insure a 15 correct decision. Of course, despite the pending LUBA appeal, Huhtala could 16 have been motivated entirely by a desire to ensure that the county’s decision on 17 OPC’s application is legally sound, but it does mean that a reconsidered 18 decision was not “necessary” to ensure that there was a final decision in this 19 matter or that any such decision was reviewed for legal errors. And we believe 20 it seriously undermines any ability to conclude consistently with this record

¹⁶ It is worth noting, that in the 36 years since Eastgate was decided, that decision has been cited and relied on by the Court of Appeals exactly once. Miller v. City of Portland, 55 Or App 633, 639 P2d 680 (1982). In Miller the Court of Appeals cited Eastgate without discussion in affirming LUBA’s determination that one of the decision makers in that appeal had not been shown to have disqualifying bias. Miller v. City of Portland, 2 Or LUBA 363, 367-68 (1981).

1 that Huhtala was motivated solely by an interest in achieving a legally correct 2 decision. We also believe the timing of the vote to withdraw the decision for 3 reconsideration—one day after Huhtala and the other newly elected 4 commissioners took office—also raises serious questions about their 5 impartiality. Thus, even though Huhtala’s participation in the reconsideration 6 proceedings was active and extensive, not pro forma, the quick action to 7 withdraw the decision on January 13, 2011, without any substantive discussion 8 of the withdrawn decision, is most consistent with a view that Huhtala was 9 driven more by his past opposition to LNG facilities and less by any concern he 10 may have had regarding the legal merits of the withdrawn decision.¹⁷

11 To summarize, Huhtala’s activities over the years as a persistent 12 opponent of LNG generally and the Oregon LNG terminal and OPC pipeline 13 proposal in particular leading up to the original November 8, 2010 BOC 14 decision set him apart from commissioners Birkby and Lee. But while coming 15 reasonably close, those activities, by themselves, are likely not strong enough 16 evidence of bias to require Huhtala’s disqualification as a decision maker for 17 OPC’s application. However, because the November 8, 2010 decision and 18 LUBA appeal made his participation unnecessary, Huhtala’s action to take the 19 additional step of pulling that decision back for reconsideration, when viewed 20 with all the other evidence that he is not capable of being impartial in this 21 matter, is collectively clear and unmistakable evidence that Huhtala acted in ¹⁷ Contrary to the dissent’s suggestion, we do not suggest that Huhtala acted in concert with others to deny the application. We only suggest that Huhtala’s decision to withdraw the decision for reconsideration one day after taking office, viewed in context with the many other actions Huhtala has taken with regard to LNG, makes his claim to be merely acting in this matter as an impartial decision maker not believable.

1 this matter with actual bias and should instead have refrained from voting to 2 withdraw the decision and voting to deny it. We do not reach the same 3 conclusion regarding the other two new commissioners, even though they also 4 participated in the hasty vote to withdraw the November 8, 2010 decision for 5 reconsideration, because their other actions do not even approach the nature 6 and extent of activity that Huhtala has engaged in in opposing LNG generally 7 and this proposal in particular.

8 Petitioner’s second assignment of error is sustained with regard to 9 commissioner Huhtala and denied with regard to commissioners Birkby and 10 Lee.

11 THIRD ASSIGNMENT OF ERROR

12 ORS 215.422(3) provides:

13 “No decision or action of a planning commission or county 14 governing body shall be invalid due to ex parte contact or bias 15 resulting from ex parte contact with a member of the decision-16 making body, if the member of the decision-making body 17 receiving the contact:

18 “(a) Places on the record the substance of any written or oral ex 19 parte communications concerning the decision or action; 20 and 21 “(b) Has a public announcement of the content of the 22 communication and of the parties’ right to rebut the 23 substance of the communication made at the first hearing 24 following the communication where action will be 25 considered or taken on the subject to which the 26 communication related.”

27 In its third assignment of error, petitioner contends the three newly 28 elected commissioners were required to disclose any contacts they may have 29 had in this matter any time after the application was submitted on October 9,

1 2009, and the three commissioners improperly limited their ex parte contact 2 disclosures to contacts that may have happened after they took office on 3 January 12, 2011. The county attorney agreed with petitioner regard the scope 4 of the ex parte contact disclosure obligation and advised the new county 5 commissioners that they were required to disclose any contacts they may have 6 had regarding OPC's application before or after they were sworn in as county 7 commissioners on January 12, 2011.¹⁸ The minutes of the February 9, 2011
8 BOC meeting include the following:

9 “* * * Regarding the ex parte contact declarations, [petitioner's 10 attorney] implied that he had specific incidents in mind, so [the 11 county's attorney] encouraged the commissioners to reflect on 12 what possible things may have occurred that they'd not previously 13 disclosed so to make them known at the next meeting.” Record
14 A1436.

15 At the beginning of the March 9, 2011 hearing, the minutes reflect that the 16 commission chair inquired have there “been any new ex parte contacts since 17 the last meeting, and none were reported.” Record A1045.

18 Relying in large part on the invitation regarding ex parte contacts at the 19 beginning of the March 9, 2011 hearing, which only explicitly called for 20 disclosure of contacts that post-dated the February 9, 2011 meeting, petitioner 21 contends the new county commissioners improperly limited their disclosures to 22 the time period after they were sworn in, on January 12, 2011.

23 Most of petitioner's concerns appear to be directed at commissioner 24 Huhtala. However, in view of our resolution of the second assignment of error, 25 commissioner Huhtala will not be participating in this matter on remand.

¹⁸ A partial transcript of the county attorney's advice to the commissioners is provided at page 37 of the petition for review.

1 Therefore, we need not resolve whether Huhtala may have had undisclosed ex
2 parte contacts that pre-dated January 12, 2011.¹⁹

3 With regard to commissioner Birkby, in addition to the request to 4 disclose any contacts since the February 9, 2011 meeting, petitioner relies on 5 the following statement made by commissioner Birkby at the February 9, 2011 6 meeting:

7 “Mr. Chairman, I don’t believe I’ve had any ex parte comment 8 since taking office and acting in the position of a member on this 9 Board.”²⁰

10 However, later at that February 9, 2011 meeting, the minutes show Birkby 11 stated she had never spoken about the application to anyone:

12 “[Commissioner Birkby] added she’d never spoken to anyone 13 about the application because she’d never read it until a couple 14 days prior. * * *” Record A1430-31.

15 Given that unqualified disclaimer of any ex parte contacts, and the county 16 attorney’s clear statement to the BOC that any contacts regarding the 17 application needed to be disclosed, we find petitioner’s speculation that ¹⁹ Huhtala stated “he did not talk with either [Columbia Riverkeeper or Columbia River Business Alliance] about the application, further explaining he was exceptionally careful after the election in talking to others that were either opposed or in favor of the application * * *.” Record A1430. While this statement does not expressly disclaim any contacts that may have occurred before the election, the statement expressly disclaims any contacts after the election in May 2010 and disclaims any contacts with Columbia Riverkeeper or Columbia River Business Alliance, the two organizations that petitioner expresses the most concern over regarding ex parte contacts.

²⁰ The quote is taken from a partial transcript on page 37 of the petition for review.

1 commissioner Birkby limited her disclosure to those that occurred after she was 2 sworn in as a commissioner unpersuasive.

3 Finally, with regard to commissioner Lee, we similarly reject petitioner's 4 speculation, based on the commission chair's invitation to disclose ex parte 5 contacts that had occurred since the February 9, 2011 meeting, that 6 commissioner Lee must have ignored the county attorney's advice that he must 7 disclose any contacts regarding OPC's application, and limited his disclosure to 8 those that may have occurred after he was sworn in as a county commissioner.

9 The third assignment of error is denied.

10 FOURTH ASSIGNMENT OF ERROR

11 At its February 9, 2011 meeting in this matter, the BOC determined that 12 its proceedings on remand would be limited to the evidentiary record that was 13 compiled for the original November 8, 2010 decision. The BOC considered 14 four ways to go about its reconsideration:

15 "[T]he Board Could: 1) Limit to [BOC] deliberations only with no 16 new testimony; 2) Open it for the limited purposes of asking staff 17 questions; 3) Open it solely for the Land Use Board of Appeals 18 (LUBA) parties to make argument based on the existing record; or 19 4) open it for all interested parties in the prior proceedings to make 20 argument based on the existing record. * * *" Record A1424.

21 All parties recommended option 3, and option 3 is the procedure the BOC 22 elected at its February 9, 2011 meeting. Petitioner contends that despite its 23 decision to limit its reconsideration proceedings to the evidentiary record 24 compiled for the November 8, 2010 decision, the BOC nevertheless accepted 25 new evidence and relied on that new evidence without giving petitioner an 26 opportunity to rebut that evidence. Petitioner contends the BOC therefore 27 committed a procedural error that prejudiced its substantial rights. ORS 28 197.835(9)(a)(B).

1 A. Hammond Testimony

2 Petitioner was not present at the BOC’s March 9, 2011 hearing.²¹ At that 3 hearing, the BOC asked some questions of the county’s consultant Hammond:

4 “[Commissioner] Rhone invited questions from the [BOC] for the 5 consultants. [Commissioner] Birkby asked Hammond, a 6 geological engineer, what is involved in the consideration of HDD 7 [Horizontal Directional Drilling] and incidence of frack out.
8 Hammond said he’d never been personally involved in a HDD 9 project, but explained that the process uses bentonite mud to keep 10 the hole open as they’re drilling the hole. During the process and 11 because there is a balance between pressure, there is always a 12 chance that mud could fracture out at the surface, hence the term 13 ‘frack out’. He added that the chances of fracturing out at soils are 14 greater in more shallow areas. [Commissioner] Roberts said she 15 didn’t think it was a new technique and Hammond agreed that it 16 was not. She asked how many pipes currently run beneath the 17 Lewis and Clark River, and he said he didn’t know.

18 “[Commissioner] Huhtala said he wanted to understand better the 19 geological hazard permit as it related to what would happen in the 20 event of a subduction zone earthquake. [The county’s lawyer] said 21 he was concerned about getting outside the record, because 22 evidence is considered ‘new’ unless the consultant’s opinion on 23 the matter was already part of the record. * * *” Record A1049.

24 At the October 9, 2013 reconsideration hearing, petitioner objected to the 25 county’s acceptance of the above testimony without giving petitioner an 26 opportunity to rebut. Record A409. Petitioner argues:

27 “* * * Mr. Hammond provided extensive testimony about HDD, 28 frac-outs, geological issues and the impact of a subduction zone 29 earthquake. (Rec. A1049). An expert’s opinion testimony is ²¹ As noted earlier, petitioner took the position that the circuit court alternative writ of mandamus divested the county of jurisdiction over this matter.

1 evidence. * * * Mr. Hammond’s expert opinion was clearly new 2 evidence since he had not previously provided this testimony.
3 Since the Board denied the Application in part on the grounds that 4 HDD did not adequately mitigate the impacts to the estuary, the 5 Board clearly was or might have been influenced by this expert 6 testimony. * * *” Petition for Review 40-41.

7 The county attorney cautioned Hammond about giving testimony that 8 might constitute evidence beyond the evidence already in the record, with 9 regard to the geological hazard permit and subduction zone earthquakes. We 10 see no testimony from Hammond on either of those subjects at Record A1049.

11 Hammond did give a general description of how Horizontal Directional 12 Drilling (HDD) works using Bentonite mud, how pressure can cause a “frack 13 out” and that fracturing is more likely in shallow areas. The county responds 14 that none of this is new evidence. Although some of the pages cited by the 15 county do not include the information the county says it does, Section 8 of 16 Appendix F of petitioner’s application appears at Record 11145-48, and is 17 entitled “Horizontal Directional Drilling Frac-Out Contingency Plan.” Record 18 11145 includes the following discussion:

19 “* * * HDD operations potentially pose a risk to wetlands and 20 water bodies through frac-outs. A frac-out occurs when the 21 drilling fluid is released through fractured bedrock and sands.
22 Drilling fluid typically consists of a mixture of bentonite, water, 23 and soil cuttings. This mixture is not hazardous or toxic, but it 24 could potentially affect the water quality of any waterbody if it 25 were introduced.

26 “Frac-outs can occur at any place along any point of an HDD 27 installation, although they are more likely to be observed at the 28 entry and exit points (locations where the drilling bit or head is 29 shallow). * * *”

30 The application goes on to explain how petitioner plans to monitor the HDD 31 and explains “[t]he bentonite mixture will be adjusted to match the conditions

1 of the subsurface. The pressure levels will be set as low as possible, and they 2 will be closely monitored to ensure that the pressure on the drilling fluid is set 3 to match the formation.” Record 11146.

4 We agree with the county that Hammond’s testimony did not include 5 new evidence that would give rise to a right to rebut. Hammond’s testimony is 6 entirely consistent with statements petitioner made in the application.

7 B. Category 2 Shorelands

8 During the proceedings that led to the November 8, 2010 decision, the 9 county concluded that the proposed pipeline does not cross any Category 2 10 Shorelands. During the reconsideration proceedings, the county concluded that 11 it does cross Category 2 Shorelands and that the proposed pipeline is not 12 allowed in those Category 2 Shorelands. Record A558. The county’s 13 conclusions that the pipeline crosses Category 2 Shorelands and that those 14 Category 2 Shorelands do not permit the proposed pipeline relied on a planning 15 staff PowerPoint presentation. Record A463-73. That PowerPoint presentation 16 sets out text from the Clatsop County Land and Water Development and Use 17 Ordinance (LWDUO), the Clatsop County Comprehensive Plan, the Goal 17 – 18 Findings and Policies for Rural Shorelands and the Columbia River Resource 19 Base Maps. We do not understand petitioner to contend that the Clatsop 20 County Comprehensive Plan or the LWDUO are new evidence or that the 21 county may not take official notice of those documents, which presumably 22 were adopted by ordinance. However, petitioner does contend that the 23 Columbia River Resource Base Maps and the Goal 17 – Findings and Policies 24 for Rural Shorelands are new evidence and are not properly the subject of 25 official notice.

1 The county takes the position that the documents it relied on in the 2 PowerPoint presentation are all subject to judicial notice under Oregon
3 Evidence Code (OEC) 202(7). OEC 202(7) authorizes judicial notice of “[a]n 4 ordinance, comprehensive plan or enactment of any county or incorporated city 5 in this state * * *.’ We understand petitioner to contend that neither the 6 Columbia River Resource Base Maps nor the Goal 17 – Findings and Policies 7 for Rural Shorelands qualify as “[a]n ordinance, comprehensive plan or 8 enactment” of the county.

9 Turning first to the Goal 17 – Findings and Policies for Rural 10 Shorelands, the PowerPoint presentation takes the position that the findings 11 and policies were adopted by Ordinance 83-17. Record A472. The challenged 12 decision takes the same position. Record A403. Petitioner offers no reason to 13 believe the findings and policies were not adopted by Ordinance 83-17 except 14 its unsupported contention that they were not. We reject petitioner’s challenge 15 with regard to the Goal 17 – Findings and Policies for Rural Shorelands.

16 With regard to the Columbia River Resource Base Maps, the county
17 contends that those maps are “referred to in Goal 17 of the [Clatsop County 18 Comprehensive Plan],” and “[t]hus the map is part of a county land use 19 ordinance.” Respondent’s Brief 37. The county neither provides us with a 20 copy of the plan reference to the maps nor explains why that reference might 21 make those maps part of the comprehensive plan or the Clatsop County 22 LWDUO. Those maps appear to have played a key role in the staff’s analysis.
23 Unless those maps are part of the Clatsop County Comprehensive Plan, the 24 LWDUO or some other ordinance, they are not subject to official notice and the 25 county should not have considered them in the reconsideration proceedings

1 without giving petitioner an opportunity to comment on those maps and rebut 2 the staff conclusions based on those maps.

3 Petitioner's argument regarding the county's reliance on the Columbia 4 River Base Maps is sustained. On remand, if the county wishes to rely on those 5 maps, it must give petitioner an opportunity to comment on those maps and 6 rebut the planning staffs' conclusions based on those maps.

7 C. Zoning Map Error

8 Petitioner's final objection under this assignment of error is based on a 9 misunderstanding of the identity of the County's Official zoning maps. As 10 planning staff explained at the October 9, 2013 hearing, one of the parcels the 11 pipeline crosses was zoned Forest 38 in 1980. The county adopted 12 comprehensive changes to its comprehensive plan and zoning ordinance in 13 1983, and that parcel should have been zoned Forest 80, which was the 14 corresponding zone, but instead was mistakenly zoned Open Space Parks and 15 Recreation (OSPR). While it apparently was a mistake, the ordinance that 16 amended the county's official zoning map designation for the property 17 designated the parcel OSPR. The county's GIS map, which is not the county's 18 official zoning map but is intended to be consistent with the official zoning 19 map, erroneously shows that the parcel is zoned Forest 80. In short, the 20 county's official zoning map erroneously shows the property zoned OSPR 21 while the unofficial GIS map shows the parcel zoned Forest 80, which is the 22 designation the county's official zoning map should show for the property.
23 The pipeline is allowed in the Forest 80 zone but is not allowed in the OSPR 24 zone. When petitioner submitted its application for the pipeline, it used the 25 county GIS mapping to determine zoning.

1 The county's solution for the zoning map problem was to impose a 2 condition of approval that before the pipeline could commence construction, 3 the zoning for the parcel would have to be changed to Forest 80. The county 4 represents that it initiated action to correct the zoning map error and an 5 ordinance adopted on February 26, 2014, changed the zoning designation for 6 the parcel to Forest 80.

7 Based on the above, we conclude the county committed no error by 8 referring to (taking official notice of) its official zoning maps to identify the 9 correct zoning for the parcel. Given that the county has now taken steps to 10 have the property rezoned to the Forest 80 zoning that petitioners understood it 11 to be zoned all along, any error the county may have committed also appears to 12 be harmless.

13 The fourth assignment of error is sustained with regard to the county's 14 consideration of the Columbia River Resource Base Maps. The fourth 15 assignment of error is otherwise denied.

16 CONCLUSION

17 Our resolution of the second and fourth assignments of error requires 18 remand. That decision on remand may or may not deny petitioner's 19 application. Even if it again denies the application, that decision may or may 20 not adopt all of the many reasons the decision before us adopts in support of 21 the denial decision. We therefore do not consider petitioner's remaining nine 22 assignments of error which challenge findings that may not be readopted on 23 remand.

24 Although the vote to deny petitioner's application on October 9, 2013 25 was unanimous, it was adopted with the active participation of commissioner 26 Huhtala, who we have determined was not impartial in this matter and should

1 not have participated. Accordingly, remand is required. Woodard 54 Or 2 LUBA 190; Halverson Mason 39 Or LUBA 711. The county will need to 3 render its decision on remand, without the participation of commissioner 4 Huhtala, unless he is required on remand to achieve a quorum or achieve the 5 number of votes needed to act under applicable local law. Wal-Mart v. City of 6 Hood River, slip op 18-19. In that event he may vote, but must fully disclose 7 any ex parte contacts that preceded his election to the BOC and refrain from 8 participating in the deliberations.

9 We finally address one remaining and frankly odd aspect of this case.
10 Petitioner contends that because commissioner Huhtala is biased he should not 11 have participated in the January 13, 2011 decision to withdraw the November 12 8, 2010 decision for reconsideration. We agree with petitioner. However, 13 given the course of events following the county's January 13, 2011 decision to 14 withdraw the November 8, 2010 decision, nothing can be done at this point to 15 rectify that erroneous decision beyond insuring that the county's final 16 reconsidered decision on petitioner's application is rendered by unbiased 17 decision makers.

18 The November 8, 2010 decision was appealed to LUBA in LUBA No.
19 2010-109 and was withdrawn pursuant to ORS 197.830(13)(b). That decision 20 has now been replaced with the county's October 16, 2013 decision. As a 21 result of our resolution of this appeal, that October 16, 2013 decision will now 22 be replaced by the county's decision following our remand. However, while it 23 is possible that the county will readopt the substance of its November 8, 2010 24 decision without change—and if it does so that decision will be subject to 25 appeal to LUBA—the November 8, 2010 decision no longer exists and the 26 county's January 13, 2011 decision to withdraw that now-nonexistent decision

1 cannot be undone given the actions that have been taken following the January 2 13, 2011 withdrawal. Accordingly, in a separate final opinion issued this date, 3 the appeal of the November 8, 2010 decision is dismissed.

4 The county's decision is remanded.
5 Ryan, Board Chair, dissenting.

6 The majority concludes that petitioner has demonstrated that Huhtala 7 was biased and should not have been allowed to participate in the decision.
8 For the reasons set forth below, I respectfully disagree with the majority's 9 resolution of the second assignment of error. I would deny the assignment of 10 error and proceed to reach the merits of the appeal.

11 In 1000 Friends of Oregon v. Wasco Co. Court, 304 Or 76, 82-83, 742
12 P2d 39 (1987), the Oregon Supreme Court explained its view of the role 13 elected officials play in their positions, and that view is worth repeating here:

14 “[County commissioners] are politically elected to positions that 15 do not separate legislative from executive and judicial power on 16 the state or federal model; characteristically they combine
17 lawmaking with administration that is sometimes executive and 18 sometimes adjudicative. The combination leaves little room to 19 demand that an elected board member who actively pursues a
20 particular view of the community's interest in his policymaking
21 role must maintain an appearance of having no such view when 22 the decision is to be made by an adjudicatory procedure.”

23 As the Court explained later in the opinion, an elected official's action is not 24 invalid for bias merely because an elected official takes a particular position on 25 an issue of interest to the community and later makes a decision on that same 26 issue in an adjudicatory procedure. Rather, it is only actual bias that will 27 invalidate an official's action in an adjudicatory procedure. In order to 28 successfully challenge a decision maker's participation on grounds of bias, 29 petitioner must demonstrate “prejudgment of facts to such an extent that an

1 official is incapable of rendering a fair judgment.” 41 Op Atty Gen 490, 491 2 (1981). Actual bias sufficiently strong to disqualify a decision maker must be 3 demonstrated in a “clear and unmistakable manner.” Halvorson Mason Corp.
4 v. City of Depoe Bay, 39 Or LUBA 702, 710 (2001). That is so because 5 disqualification is a “drastic step to be taken only when there is a clear showing 6 of actual prejudice or bias. * * *” Eastgate Theatre v. Bd. of County Comm’rs, 7 37 Or App 745, 750-52, 588 P2d 640 (1978).

8 The majority concludes Huhtala was biased based on (1) some or all of 9 Huhtala’s actions and statements opposing LNG projects prior to being elected 10 to the county commission and (2) his action after becoming a county 11 commissioner to vote in favor of withdrawing the November 8, 2010 decision 12 for reconsideration. But in my view, at best, Huhtala’s actions and statements 13 prior to being elected to the county commission demonstrate a predisposition to 14 oppose LNG projects, or an appearance that Huhtala was biased. The Oregon 15 Supreme Court has rejected disqualification of an elected quasi-judicial 16 decision maker based on an appearance or inference of bias. 1000 Friends, 304 17 Or at 85.

18 The majority relies on a number of Huhtala’s statements and actions, 19 some dating back almost ten years, to conclude that petitioner has demonstrated 20 in a “clear and unmistakable manner” that Huhtala was incapable of rendering 21 a fair judgment on the application based on the facts and the law. The way in 22 which the majority opinion is structured and the number of pages the majority 23 takes to set out various statements and actions of Huhtala dating back almost 24 ten years seems to bolster the majority’s conclusion. Slip Op 30-38. However, 25 when looking beyond the sheer number of words and pages to the content, it 26 does not support that conclusion.

1 The majority spends a great deal of time and ink to construct a “totality 2 of circumstances” that quotes Huhtala’s statements and describes actions taken 3 in matters dating back nearly ten years that have only a tangential relationship 4 to the present application for a conditional use permit for a pipeline. The 5 common thread in the statements and actions is that Huhtala took positions on 6 various aspects of two proposals to develop LNG terminals, one within the City 7 of Warrenton and the second in the county, which would both require dredging 8 of the Columbia River to allow transport of LNG tankers in the Columbia River 9 to the terminal. Huhtala has been a county resident for nearly 50 years, and it 10 is unsurprising that he has taken positions on issues of importance in his 11 county.

12 I do not agree with the majority that Huhtala’s statements and actions 13 regarding the two LNG terminal proposals have much if any probative value in 14 assessing whether he should be disqualified from participating in the 15 adjudicatory procedure on the CUP application for a pipeline in 2013. In 16 particular, I strongly disagree that statements that Huhtala made and actions he 17 took in 2005 while campaigning for Port of Astoria Commissioner - more than 18 eight years before the October, 2013 decision, and in 2009 while campaigning 19 for the Oregon House of Representatives - more than 4 years before the 2013 20 decision, are probative in determining whether Huhtala was biased when he 21 participated in the pipeline application decision in 2013. I also disagree with 22 the majority that Huhtala’s participation in a 2009 appeal to LUBA of the 23 county’s approval of a LNG terminal in a different location in the county 24 (Bradwood Landing) is probative in determining whether Huhtala was able, in 25 2013, to render an impartial decision on the facts and the application before 26 him for an entirely different proposal.

1 Further, the majority significantly extends LUBA’s case law on bias by 2 characterizing Huhtala’s participation in a 2006 appeal to LUBA of a 2005 City 3 of Warrenton decision to approve an LNG terminal in the Columbia River as 4 participation in the “same matter” that was before the county, in disregard of 5 the lengthy (6 to 8 year) temporal lapse between the city and the county actions 6 and the differing criteria in the decision making jurisdictions. In my view, the 7 2005 city proceeding to rezone property from a conservation/recreation zone to 8 an industrial zone to allow construction of a terminal on the river, and the 9 2010-2013 county proceedings on the CUP application for a pipeline are not 10 the “same matter.” The city of Warrenton’s 2005 decision approved a map 11 amendment and zone change to change a parcel zoned conservation and 12 recreation to industrial, and applied entirely different criteria. The appeal of the 13 2005 City of Warrenton decision raised legal questions regarding whether the 14 rezoning met the city’s criteria for rezoning and map amendments. The present 15 application seeks conditional use approval for a 41-mile pipeline that crosses 16 eight different county zone and plan districts. The 2005 rezoning and map 17 amendment decision, by the city, and the 2013 CUP decision, by the county, 18 are not the “same matter.” As the county succinctly puts it, “[t]o hold that a 19 citizen’s pursuit of legitimate legal remedies disqualif[ies] that person from 20 subsequent land use duties as an elected official would have a chilling effect on 21 those who follow the common career path from public advocacy to public 22 office.” Respondent’s Response Brief 21.

23 The majority’s conclusion that the city and county proceedings are the 24 “same matter” is also inconsistent with our decisions in Woodard and in Wal-
25 Mart (Hood River). In Woodard, we concluded that a city councilor’s actions 26 in support of the same speedway when it was under consideration for

1 nonconforming use verification by the county were “not particularly probative” 2 in determining whether a city councilor was biased in proceedings before the 3 city that occurred several years after the county proceeding and after the 4 speedway was annexed by the city. Woodard, 54 Or LUBA at 181. In Wal-
5 Mart (Hood River), we held that the biased councilor’s previous action 6 opposing a different Wal-Mart located within the county’s planning jurisdiction 7 did not necessarily mean that she could not render an impartial decision on a 8 different application to expand the existing store located in the city. Wal-Mart
9 (Hood River) __ Or LUBA __ (LUBA No. 2013-009, May 21, 2013, slip op 10 14).

11 The majority sets out the few cases in which LUBA has agreed that a 12 petitioner met his or her burden of demonstrating bias. Slip Op 19-27. In all of 13 those cases, the biased decision maker took prejudicial action during the course 14 of the proceeding on the application that led to the challenged decision. See 15 Halvorson Mason (councilor publicly opposed the application while it was 16 pending before the city council); Friends of Jacksonville (while the application 17 was pending before the city council, city councilor submitted a legal analysis 18 supporting approval); Woodard (while the application was pending city 19 councilors requested and publicized police logs detailing police contacts with a 20 project opponent in order to discredit the opponent before the other 21 councilors); Wal-Mart (Hood River) (while the application was pending, city 22 councilor submitted a legal analysis to the city council detailing the reasons 23 why the applicant did not possess a vested right to complete development). But 24 contrary to the majority’s unsupported assertion at Slip Op 44, the record 25 includes no statements made or actions taken by Huhtala prior to (or after, for 1 that matter) the time he was elected that took a position on the legal issues or 2 the merits of petitioner’s application for the 41-mile pipeline.

3 Second, in my view, the majority’s reliance on Huhtala’s vote, along 4 with three other commissioners, to withdraw the November 8, 2010 decision 5 for reconsideration as clear and unmistakable evidence of bias is simply not 6 supported by the record, and is contrary to applicable law allowing the county
7 to unilaterally withdraw a decision for reconsideration. Whether Huhtala’s 8 participation in the decision to withdraw the November, 2010 decision for 9 reconsideration was necessary to reach a decision, because the previous county 10 commissioners had already reached a decision, is not relevant to determining 11 whether Huhtala’s vote to withdraw the decision is evidence of bias. Further, 12 the majority’s discussion implicates the concept of the “rule of necessity” that 13 is not at issue in this appeal and conflates it with the threshold issue of whether 14 an elected quasi-judicial decision maker is biased. Slip Op 43.

15 The majority also relies on the timing of the county commission’s 16 January 13, 2011 vote as strong evidence that Huhtala was biased on January 17 13, 2011, and again when he voted in October, 2013, to deny the application.
18 But in order to reach that conclusion, the majority must engage in speculation 19 that Huhtala was a participant in, and even the lead proponent of, some sort of 20 concerted effort that apparently involved Huhtala, the county’s counsel, county 21 planning department, and other commissioners to withdraw the county’s 22 November, 2010 decision. On the contrary, in our February 17, 2011 order in 23 LUBA No. 2010-109, we concluded the opposite.²²

²² A sworn affidavit from the county’s attorney in LUBA No. 2010-109 avers that the planning department sought a 30-day extension of the deadline for transmitting the record, to January 14, 2011, based on the county attorney’s

1 In addition, commissioners Birkby, Lee, and Rohne also voted on 2 January 13, 2011 in favor of withdrawing the decision. The majority fails to 3 explain why Birkby's and Lee's votes to withdraw do not demonstrate similar 4 bias in their 2013 decision making, given Birkby's and Lee's prior statements 5 opposing LNG projects, other than to distinguish the "nature and extent" of 6 Birkby's and Lee's opposition to LNG projects from Huhtala's opposition to 7 LNG projects. Slip Op 45. That distinction is unpersuasive.

8 Finally, the majority further supports its conclusion that Huhtala was 9 biased by characterizing the proceeding on January 13, 2011 as a "quick action 10 * * * without any substantive discussion" of whether to withdraw the decision.
11 Slip Op 44. But from the meeting minutes included in the record, it appears 12 that the decision to withdraw may have been made after the commissioners 13 conducted business in executive session on litigation matters, as they are 14 entitled to do under ORS 192.660(1)(h). Record A1448. However, even if the 15 decision was made during the regular business portion of the meeting, the 16 majority points to no statutory or local code provision that requires the county 17 commission to conduct "substantive discussion" - either during the public 18 portion of the meeting or in executive session - about whether to withdraw a 19 decision for reconsideration. As explained above, ORS 197.830(13)(b) gives 20 the county the unilateral right to withdraw any decision for reconsideration as 21 long as it is withdrawn before the deadline set for transmitting the record. In 22 fact, the first public hearing on reconsideration in March, 2011 lasted five and 23 one-half hours. That is hardly a "quick action."

advice to seek a 30-day extension due to the size of the record and a staff shortage at the planning department.

1 During the proceedings on the application in 2010, the county’s planning 2 staff recommended denial of the application, both to the hearings officer, and 3 then to the board of commissioners. It is possible, even likely, that the 4 county’s planning staff continued to take that position and took the position 5 after the decision was rendered that the county’s decision approving the 6 application could more than likely result in reversal or remand by LUBA. That 7 seems like exactly the circumstance that the legislature anticipated in giving 8 local governments the right to unilaterally withdraw a decision. For all of the 9 above reasons, I disagree with the majority that Huhtala’s vote, along with 10 three other commissioners, to withdraw the decision for reconsideration is 11 evidence of bias.

12 Friends of Jacksonville is the only LUBA decision resolving a bias claim 13 that was appealed to the Court of Appeals on that particular issue, and it was 14 affirmed. For that reason, in my view it provides the most relevant precedent 15 for resolving a claim of bias. In Friends of Jacksonville, LUBA found that the 16 second councilor was biased based on statements that he made prior to being 17 elected to the city council that “he did not feel the need to be objective 18 regarding” the church’s application, as well as actions he took after taking 19 office that included signing a petition in favor of the application and submitting 20 a document into the record that explained why he believed the church’s 21 application met the applicable approval criteria. 42 Or LUBA at 144-45.

22 But LUBA rejected a bias challenge to a different councilor’s 23 participation (the first councilor). LUBA found that her statements prior to 24 being elected to the city council indicated at most a predisposition toward the 25 church that did not require recusal, when LUBA took into account her 26 indication upon questioning by the church’s attorney that she could decide the 1 application on the facts and the law before her. 42 Or LUBA at 143. And 2 unlike the second councilor, the first councilor took no further action after 3 being elected to call into question her statement that she could decide the 4 application on the facts and the law before her. The first councilor also 5 ultimately voted to approve the church’s application, which she was apparently 6 predisposed to do. In my view, the claim of bias against Huhtala falls squarely 7 within LUBA’s disposition of the bias claim against the first councilor in 8 Friends of Jacksonville and much further from the claim against the second 9 councilor.

10 Huhtala’s statement is quoted in the majority opinion and it is worth 11 repeating here:

12 “It is clear that I’ve personally expressed many concerns about 13 many aspects of LNG transport. As I mentioned, tanker traffic, 14 dredging issues, safety, the size of the facility in Bradwood, the 15 road conditions – some of the same issues the applicant raised in 16 the Bradwood situation. My reasonable concerns don’t cause me 17 to prejudge the situation. This is a complex application. There is 18 nothing that prevents me from assessing the facts under review. I 19 have the ability to set aside any personal views and to evaluate, 20 discuss and vote on matters of fact. Of course I expressed 21 personal opinions while I was campaigning. Citizens expect 22 politicians to have opinions, but past association or articulation 23 does not predict future decisions that will be based on a record of 24 facts. I enter this hearing without preconception. I understand my 25 responsibility in a quasi-judicial setting. I take it seriously that I 26 need to remain unbiased during this process and set aside personal 27 views. We all have personal views. One thing that I have been 28 elected to do is to [sic] sit impartially in a quasi-judicial setting 29 and make decisions based upon the facts.” Record A1612.

30 In my view, the majority incorrectly discounts and dismisses Huhtala’s 31 statement as “not credible” based on a mere inference of bias. The majority 32 simply doesn’t believe him. But Huhtala’s statement that he can make an

1 impartial decision is as convincing as the first councilor’s statement in Friends
2 of Jacksonville that LUBA concluded was enough to overcome her prior 3 predisposition towards approving the church’s application.

4 In my view petitioner has not demonstrated in a clear and unmistakable
5 manner that Huhtala was actually biased, any more than a candidate for city 6 council who engages in “economic boosterism” or emphatically and repeatedly 7 states that she supports “bringing industry” or “bringing jobs” to her city is 8 actually biased if she wins the election and later votes to approve a 9 development application that brings in industry and provides jobs.
10 Disqualification of an elected official in the circumstances here is not 11 warranted.

12 For the reasons set forth above, I respectfully disagree with the 13 majority’s resolution of the second assignment of error. I would deny the 14 second assignment of error and proceed to resolve the merits of the appeal.
