
Engaging Equity: Equitable Mindsets, Practices, and Systems - Learning Opportunity for Schools and Districts – Full Series Now Available!

This professional learning series is open, universal, and invitational. The series equips educators to create positive connections and strengthen community and learning conditions to improve student outcomes. This professional learning series is for adults, with the aim to improve educational conditions for each and every student given the changing demographics in Oregon. It is not a curriculum for students.

The Engaging Equity professional learning series is made up of 4 clusters with a total of 18 individual modules. For more details, view the full scope and sequence for the professional learning series. Each module should take 60–90 minutes for the learner to complete. All four clusters of modules are available at this time:

- Cluster 1 – Racial Equity Foundations
- Cluster 2 – Culturally Responsive and Sustaining Practice
- Cluster 3 – Applying Equity Skills to Educate Diverse Populations
- Cluster 4 – Building Equitable Education Systems

To learn how to access the modules, please see page 4 of this flyer.

Frequently Asked Questions: These FAQs could be used by district and school leaders as they are sharing more information about this opportunity with their staff and communities.

General Facilitator's Guide: This guide can be used by facilitators of professional learning communities (PLCs) or cohorts participating in the Engaging Equity professional learning series to set up and prepare to engage participants during sessions.

Facilitation and Cost

The content developed is open and available at no cost; however, there may be some costs for participation, such as substitute costs for educators or extra-duty pay for extended day learning opportunities.

ODE highly recommends that groups engage in this learning together as cohorts or Professional Learning Communities (PLCs), with facilitation either from within their organization, through their ESD Liaison, or for Oregon Districts, with professional facilitation from WestEd offered at no cost to districts through the Intervention & Strengthening Coaching Program.

If you are an Oregon school or district interested in having professional facilitation by WestEd for this series, please contact the Office of EII.

Racial Equity Foundations

Cluster 1 - Racial Equity Foundations

- Module 1: Setting the stage to discuss equity.
- Module 2: Introduction to bias-based beliefs and reflecting on identity.
- Module 3: Digging deeper into identity and the impact of bias-based beliefs.
- Module 4: Challenging our beliefs and identifying intervention strategies to interrupt biases.

Racial Equity Foundations, the first cluster of four within this professional learning series, was designed to help districts respond effectively to emerging needs of their school communities — while taking steps to mitigate some of the systemic disparities experienced by many students and families. Gaining skill in culturally responsive and sustaining pedagogy and practice within instruction is all about meeting every student where they are — in their strengths and needs. Every student can benefit from these universal and targeted approaches.

Cluster 1 At a Glance

Cluster 1 Facilitator's Guide: This guide provides helpful information about how to engage your team or professional learning community in the modules, including information about facilitating the community wall discussion prompts.

Participants can access the modules through the publicly available Canvas course, Cluster 1 - Racial Equity Foundations, or import the modules into your district Canvas course (Steps to Set Up the Modules in Canvas).

Culturally Responsive and Sustaining Practice

Culturally Responsive and Sustaining Practice, the second cluster of four within this professional learning series designed to focus on strategies for creating culturally responsive and sustaining learning environments and experiences for students. Examine how adults' social and emotional learning and well-being are fundamental to creating culturally responsive and sustaining learning environments.

Cluster 2 - Culturally Responsive and Sustaining Practice

- Module 1: Prioritizing adult well-being for healthy schools and positive school climate.
- Module 2: The habits of culturally responsive and sustaining educators.
- Module 3: Co-Creating the conditions for culturally responsive and sustaining learning environments.
- Module 4: Culturally responsive and sustaining instructional strategies.

Cluster 2 At a Glance

Cluster 2 Facilitator's Guide: This guide provides helpful information about how to engage your team or professional learning community in the modules, including information about facilitating the community wall discussion prompts.

Participants can access the modules through the publicly available Canvas course, Cluster 2 – Culturally Responsive and Sustaining Practice, or import the modules into your district Canvas course (Steps to Set Up the Modules in Canvas).

Equity Skills to Educate Diverse Populations

Cluster 3 – Applying Equity Skills to Educate Diverse Populations

- Module 1: Scaffolding Quality Instruction for Multilingual Learners
- Module 2: The Importance of Quality Classroom Talk for Multilingual Learners
- Module 3: Culturally Responsive and Sustaining Indigenous Education
- Module 4: Culturally Responsive and Sustaining Instructional Practices in Indigenous Education
- Module 5: Understanding the Intersection Between Ability and Race
- Module 6: Creating Authentic Engagement with Community Partners

Applying Equity Skills to Educating a Diverse Population, the third cluster of four within this professional learning series, was designed to focus on applying principles of culturally responsive and sustaining education to specific student and family populations. Explore how educator mindsets and practices can deepen educational skills in relation to students and communities, specifically students who are multilingual learners, Indigenous students, students in special education, and those with intersectional identities.

Cluster 3 At a Glance

Cluster 3 Facilitator's Guide: This guide provides helpful information about how to engage your team or professional learning community in the modules, including information about facilitating the community wall discussion prompts.

Participants can access the modules through the publicly available Canvas course, Cluster 3 – Applying Equity Skills to Educating a Diverse Population, or import the modules into your district Canvas course (Steps to Set Up the Modules in Canvas).

Building Equitable Educational Systems

Building Equitable Educational Systems, the final cluster of four within this professional learning series, was designed to focus on the systemic aspects of education, such as how assessments, student data and school and district resources are utilized to bring about equity. Explore and apply equity mindsets, skills, and practices such as culturally responsive data literacy and resource equity to prioritize equity within educational systems overall.

Cluster 4 – Building Equitable Educational Systems

- Module 1: Understanding Systemic Elements of Culturally Responsive and Sustaining Education
- Module 2: Equipping Educators with Culturally Responsive Data Literacy Skills
- Module 3: Examining Assessments with an Equity Mindset
- Module 4: Conducting Resource Equity Analyses: Understanding Data Sources

Cluster 4 At a Glance

Cluster 4 Facilitator's Guide: This guide provides helpful information about how to engage your team or professional learning community in the modules, including information about facilitating the community wall discussion prompts.

Participants can access the modules through the publicly available Canvas course, Cluster 4 – Building Equitable Educational Systems, or import the modules into your district Canvas course (Steps to Set Up the Modules in Canvas).

How to Access the Modules (two ways):

Access the modules through a publicly available Canvas course –

Cluster 1 - Racial Equity Foundations

Cluster 2 - Culturally Responsive and Sustaining Practice

Cluster 3 – Applying Equity Skills to Educating a Diverse Population

Cluster 4 – Building Equitable Educational Systems

- Individuals or groups can learn together using the public version of this course through ODE’s Canvas instance.
- Pacing is set by users.
- No login required.
- Analytics are unavailable for districts or groups that wish to track participation or use the asynchronous learning time to offer PDUs.
- Multi-user functions such as community wall with Padlet or Jamboard not embedded.

Import the modules into your district Canvas course - Steps to Set Up the Modules in Canvas

- Individuals or groups can learn together using their own instance of Canvas.
- Pacing is set by users.
- Login required as established by the district.
- Analytics are available for districts or groups that wish to track participation or use the asynchronous learning time to offer PDUs.
- Multi-user functions such as a shared community wall (Canvas discussion board, Padlet or Jamboard - see directions in the Steps to Set Up the Modules and in the Facilitator’s Guide) can be enabled for groups and used to foster more collaboration during asynchronous learning time.