PSAT Achievement Standard for Reading; Status of Achievement Standard for Math UPDATE

ODE has now received the final PSAT concordance tables (showing the scores on the old and revised PSAT that would have been met by the same percentage of students) from College Board.

- Because the final concorded reading score is the same as the preliminary concorded score, the reading achievement standard on the revised PSAT is 24 and is effective immediately for all students.

- Because the final concorded math score is 24.5, but the preliminary concorded score was 24, AESRP will convene on June 1 with plans to develop a recommendation for the State Board to adopt 24.5 as the math achievement standard on the revised PSAT. Pending AESRP's recommendation, this score would go to the Board on June 22 for adoption.

As a reminder, a math achievement standard on the revised PSAT has already been adopted for students pursuing graduation in 2016, and this would not change based on the final concordance results.

- A score of 24 or higher on the revised PSAT math test may be used by students pursuing graduation in 2016 to demonstrate proficiency on the math Essential Skill.

Students who are pursuing graduation in 2016 but do not graduate would need to meet the final PSAT achievement standard.

These achievement standards were included in the 5/19/2016 update to the Essential Skills and Local Performance Manual, available at http://www.ode.state.or.us/go/es. For additional information, please contact Cristen McLean at cristen.mclean@state.or.us.
