Let's Build an Igloo

Well see you later, I'm going to sunny sunny always sunny Florida!What?it isn't always sunny? What do you mean thunderstorm capital.Well that means I'm headed to Colorado.I'll need to re-pack then.A bottle of sunscreen, windbreaker, coat , boots,- wow-Colorado has some big weather changes.It's all thanks to the wind.Wind pushes up the mountain,making the air cooler. Florida is nice with its sun sometimes but I'd rather stick with Colorado.With its dramatic weather changes give you a bit of everything.Some sun here a little rain there and some snow to end the day.Sorry sunny (Florida), but I'm with Colorado.

You might not approve of my choice but some places may have almost one every day while other places might have only one a month.In some parts of Florida there are over 80 days with thunder and lightning in a typical year but in Colorado you get more than 300 days of sweet sunshine but, still all that snow.I don't think that the snow is all that bad though.think about it; skiing,sledding, snowmen,and snowball fights!I could make myself an igloo!

Another reason why i don't want Florida is because one of the most popular seasons- summer- is when Florida has the most thunderstorms! My parents would really hate that.It's supposed to be all sun and all things hot and more sun…. Why thunderstorms?! I don't mind them but i wish i could say to them; please stay out of my summer! The rain there is crazy. 9.64 Inches of rainfall! In Orlando!Take me of the waiting list for the houses there!

thanks to this story I'm tired of hearing the word thunderstorm. Now, i think all of us should move to Colorado right now and make an igloo because Colorado is the place to live!Florida may have the Disney park and all the stuff it's famous for but Colorado is equally great.Now, lets hop on that plane headed for Colorado and get working on that igloo in the state that is amazingly great and better than Florida(of course not better than Maine)!It’s igloo time!!!!!!!!!!
