

In elementary school we would go on a field trip once a month. I remember being a happier student, because these field trips would give me the opportunity to learn in a new exciting way, but it also would give me a time to relax from my chaotic lifestyle. That is why we should go on a field trip to the beach. The beach would give us the opportunity to learn about marine biology, also it would give us a day to relax, and there are plenty of places to eat, shop, and play which means everyone is happy.

The beach is an exciting place to learn about marine biology. You could go to the tide pools and observe a whole ecosystem in action. This would help us understand how marine animals live, eat, and survive. Another place we could go is the water's edge. We could find starfish, jellyfish, and any shellfish. We could observe the animals and how they cope with their position in being beached. Learning at the beach would be a fun and exciting place to learn about marine biology.

A field trip to the beach would also be a good way for kids to relax. Kid's everyday lives are very hectic and busy. The beach would be a perfect way for kids to relax, which would help them be well rested to be ready to learn the next day. After learning about marine biology, the kids could relax with a game of football, soccer, swimming, or any other activity they can think of. There is an activity for everybody to do. A relaxing day is what every kid needs and the beach is a perfect way to give them that privilege of relaxation.

The beach is the entertainment capital of western Oregon. This means there is plenty of places to eat. That way everybody gets what they want, which means everybody is happy. Also there is plenty of shopping at the beach. This means the girls and boys who do not want to do sport have something to do. Another thing to do for those inactive boys, there is an arcade at the beach, which gives them something to do. The beach has something for everyone.

The beach is a good learning opportunity to learn the science of marine biology. Also it gives kids the time to relax and have a good time. Finally, kids have plenty of places to eat, shop, and play and that makes everyone happy. We do not get many field trips, but I think the perfect field trip would be to go to the beach.
