Best Social Studies Websites for Teachers

Recently, a high school teacher on our WeAreTeachers HELPLINE asked readers to suggest the best social studies websites around. As usual, our teacher friends came through in force! We've rounded up the links as well as the official tout from each website. Check it out and share your picks for the best social studies websites in the comments.

1. iCivics

"iCivics gives students the necessary tools to learn about and participate in civic life, and teachers the materials and support to achieve this goal. Our free resources include print-and-go lesson plans, interactive digital tools, and award-winning games."

2. Teaching Tolerance

"Teaching Tolerance is dedicated to reducing prejudice, improving intergroup relations and supporting equitable school experiences for our nation's children. We provide free educational materials to teachers and other school practitioners in the U.S. and Canada."

3. Library of Congress

"News, events, new content & more from the National Library of Congress & specific subject areas — from legislature to poetry, from music to science, from cataloging to copyright."

4. National Archives

"Teach with documents using our online tool. Locate teachable primary sources. Find new and favorite lesson plans, and create your own activities for your students."

5. Stanford History Education Group

"The Reading Like a Historian curriculum engages students in historical inquiry. Each lesson revolves around a central historical question and features sets of primary documents designed for groups of students with diverse reading skills and abilities."

6. Historical Thinking Matters

A pick for best social studies websites “focused on key topics in U.S. history, that is designed to teach students how to critically read primary sources and how to critique and construct historical narratives.”

7. Classroom Law Project

“The Classroom Law Project brings vital and engaging civics and law-related education programs into Oregon schools, teaching students at all grade levels the values and skills essential to being a participating citizen in our democracy.”

8. Center for History and New Media

“Improving teaching and learning about the past through innovative digital resources, tools, and strategies.”

9. Teaching History

“Teachinghistory.org is designed to help K–12 history teachers access resources and materials to improve U.S. history education in the classroom.”

10. World History Matters

“A portal to world history websites including Women in World History, World History Sources and more.”

11. Teaching American History
