SUMMARY

On a periodic basis, the Oregon Forest Resources Institute (OFRI) prepares an update on the status of the forest sector in the state. In 2018, OFRI chose Oregon State University and the University of Idaho to prepare the update to the 2012 report. The “2019 Forest Report” relied on a collaborative effort between the two universities and numerous state and federal agencies (e.g., OFRI, ODF, OED, and USFS). The report encompasses the economic status and contributions of the Oregon Forest Sector as well as other aspects ranging from forest health and risks to emerging trends (e.g., Forest Certification, Carbon Offset Markets, and Emerging Products).
