

HOW WE PROTECT YOUR INFORMATION

The Oregon Department of Transportation and DMV take your privacy seriously. Our state has laws that protect your personal information from being shared publicly. Our department also has additional rules, policies and procedures to further protect your information.

Oregon's Record Privacy Law protects personal information contained in DMV records. Personal information is name, address, driver license, driver permit, identification card number and telephone number. This information is restricted and only available to qualified entities. Entities seeking personal information must provide proof of identity with DMV, certify to their intended use, and can only use personal information for authorized purposes outlined in statute.

Local, State, and Federal law enforcement agencies have access to name, address, driver license, driver permit, identification card number, telephone number, DMV photographs, and social security numbers. Any legal presence or citizenship information is strictly protected. US Citizens who choose to be automatically registered to vote will have their information shared with Oregon's Secretary of State's office for automatic voter registration purposes.

For more information, see the DMV Record Privacy Law Overview.