Speakers
See presentations in the meeting materials.

- Graham Trainor, AFL-CIO – Worker’s Perspective on Autonomous Technology, Deployment
- Becky Steckler, Urbanism Next, University of Oregon – Impacts of Emerging Technologies on Cities
- Eliot Rose, Metro - AVs and Transportation Data

- Sean Waters asked if the city of Portland will remove their automated vehicle testing framework when the state process comes into effect.
- Eric Hesse said the Portland policymakers will look into how state policies and city policies will interact, but will not relinquish the ability to regulate their streets. He noted that there will be federal guidance to consider as well.

Jebediah Doran, TriMet – AV Task Force Long Term Policy Workshop

Public Comment

Steve Halsey, a commercial motor vehicle driver with 4 million miles driven, spoke about his concern that automated technology will not be adequate to safely navigate the wide range of situations and dangers commercial vehicle drivers often face.

Discussion (Jeanne Lawson)

Facilitator Jeanne Lawson asked task force members to raise questions and considerations related to the presentations or other areas.

The task force engaged in an exercise where they each member wrote out their concerns on pieces of paper and added them to a discussion wall. They each received four dots and placed the dots by ideas they wanted to emphasize. This exercise will help inform the scoping of the possible 2019 report.

See photographs of the discussion wall below. Photographs are also available in the meeting materials.
