OHSU is acquiring our long-standing partner, Legacy Health. We are confident this action will make each of these entities even stronger and better able to serve the healthcare needs of the community at large. It's important to note that OHSU did not purchase PacificSource as part of its Legacy Health acquisition.

PacificSource members should be aware that Legacy Health will remain in-network for the foreseeable future, and they can still receive the care they need from their providers.

We look forward to our continued collaboration with OHSU and Legacy Health, as we all work together to serve our respective members and offer the best healthcare possible. PacificSource will continue to provide access to a broad range of local providers in the community to provide access to affordable care for our members in the communities we serve.

Is OHSU buying PacificSource?

No. Legacy Health will become part of OHSU, while PacificSource will remain an independent not-for-profit health plan.

I have insurance coverage through PacificSource. Am I still covered?

Your PacificSource insurance plan remains valid, and you should continue seeking care as needed.

I have a Legacy Health employee plan through PacificSource, am I still covered?

Yes, your PacificSource Legacy Employee insurance plan is still valid, and you should continue to seek care as needed.

I have a doctor's appointment in three months; should I keep that appointment?

Yes, you should keep all current and future appointments as planned. Both Legacy and OHSU remain in-network for our health plan members.

How long will it take for the transaction to get approved/completed?

We are unable to provide an exact timeframe, but similar transactions typically take between 12-18 months.

What will happen with Legacy's 50% member interest in PacificSource?

Legacy Health's corporate member status in PacificSource will transfer to the currently named Legacy Health Foundation. The Foundation will have a partial economic interest in PacificSource, and the two entities will work together to further their community-focused initiatives. PacificSource remains dedicated to its mission to provide better health, better care, and better cost to the people and communities we serve.
