

CHA/CHIP Collaboration Continuum

Competition/Cooperation	Coordination	Collaboration
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> * Loose connections, low trust * Tacit information sharing * Ad hoc communication flows * Independent goals * Adapting to each other or accommodating others' actions and goals * Power remains with organizations * Resources remain with organizations * Commitment and accountability to own organization * Relational time frame short * Low risk/reward 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> * Medium connections, work-based trust * Structured communication flows, formalized project-based information sharing * Joint policies, programs and aligned resources * Semi-interdependent goals * Power remains with parent organizations * Commitment and accountability to parent organizations and project * Relational time frame medium—based on prior projects 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> * Dense interdependent connections, high trust * Frequent communication * Tactical information sharing * System change * Pooled and collective resources * Negotiated shared goals * Power is shared between organizations * Commitment and accountability to network first, community and parent organization * Relation time frame—long term (3 years) * High risk/reward

Source: Collaboration for Impact, 2017