

Reproductive Health Access Fund: FAQs

What is the Reproductive Health Access Fund (RH Access Fund)?

The RH Access Fund is an Oregon program that covers free reproductive health services for people of any immigration status, sex, or gender identity who don't have the Oregon Health Plan (OHP). Free services are available at over 100 clinics across the state.

What are the benefits of enrolling?

By enrolling in the RH Access Fund, you can get:

- Free clinic visits for reproductive health services and STI screening services
- Free birth control method of your choice
- Free transportation to your clinic visit

Who is eligible for RH Program coverage?

To qualify for the RH Access Fund, your individual income must be at or below the amount listed here:

Household size	Weekly*	Monthly*
1	$767	$3,325
2	$1,040	$4,509
3	$1,313	$5,692
For each additional person add:	$274	$1,184

*Income before taxes as of March 2, 2026

You can qualify for the RH Access Fund even if you don't qualify for OHP. You will not be eligible if you have had your reproductive organs surgically removed or if you have gone through menopause.

Can teenagers enroll in the RH Access Fund?

Yes, both youth and adults can enroll. You should use your own income (if you have any) on the form, not your parent's or household income.

Why do you ask about my immigration status on the enrollment form, and who has access to that information?

We ask to determine how to cover your visit, but people with any immigration status can enroll in the RH Access Fund and get free services - including those who have DACA or people without documentation. You can choose to leave this question blank and still qualify for the RH Access Fund.

Unless you mark “U.S. citizen,” your citizenship or immigration status is not shared with the federal government.

Do I have to give a street address to apply for the RH Access Fund?

If you don’t have or want to give an address, you can talk with the clinic about using a different address (such as the clinic’s address).

Why would I enroll if I already have insurance?

Private medical insurance may not cover the whole cost of your reproductive health services, and you could get a bill from the clinic or lab later. If you enroll in the RH Access Fund, we will pay the remainder so that you don’t get a bill.

If you are worried about the person who pays for your insurance (like a parent or spouse) finding out that you got reproductive health services, you can enroll in the RH Access Fund and ask the clinic not to bill your private insurance.

If you have OHP, your reproductive health services will be fully covered and there is no need to enroll in the RH Access Fund.

I still don’t want to enroll in the RH Access Fund, why should I tell you my income?

Even if you choose not to enroll in the RH Access Fund, you may still be able to get discounted services if your income meets the criteria listed above. You can choose not to provide your income information, but then the clinic or lab may charge the full amount for your visit.
