DEFINITIONS:
- Attendance costs: For individuals receiving student loans, attendance cost includes regular tuition and fees for students carrying at least a half-time workload as determined by the institution, and an allowance for books, supplies, and transportation required by the course of study.

Income Gross income, including overtime, before deductions for income taxes, employees’ social security taxes, insurance premiums, bonds, etc. The determination of the amount of a household’s gross income shall not be considered reduced for any reason (e.g.; financial hardships, medical bills, child support). Farmers and self-employed use net income. Net income is determined by subtracting the operating expenses from the gross income.

BACKGROUND: USDA provides guidance on what constitutes income and what financial support a household may receive that is not included in their gross income. This policy clarifies what WIC staff should include and what should be excluded from household income calculations.

PROCEDURE:

1.0 WIC staff must assess all sources of income for a household to determine which will be included or excluded from household income calculations. See ♦ 611—Income Eligibility: Determining Income Eligibility for more information on the process for determining income eligibility for all members of a household.

2.0 Identify those sources of household income which would constitute gross income (before taxes) for the time frame reviewed. Refer to ♦ 611 for determining appropriate time frames for different situations.

3.0 Local program staff shall use net income to determine income eligibility only for farmers and self-employed persons. Net income is determined by subtracting the operating expenses from the gross income.

4.0 The determination of the amount of a household’s gross income shall not be considered reduced for any reason (e.g.; financial hardships, medical bills, child support).

Salary 6.0 Salary is gross pay before any deductions, including deductions for taxes, social security, or insurance. It includes payment for work, made directly to the worker with no taxes withheld, such as childcare done in the home.
Social Security
7.0 Social Security payments made to any member of an applicant’s household counts as income. Income also includes SSI for developmentally disabled or disabled individuals paid to an applicant or another member of the applicant’s household.

Interest
8.0 The dividends or interest on savings or bonds, incomes from estates or trusts are considered income. Any amount of capital that is regularly withdrawn and used to cover household living expenses is also counted as income.

Retirement income
9.0 Pension or retirement payments (such as retirement income received by grandparents or other household members, if part of the household supporting the WIC recipient), are considered income. This includes:

- 9.1 Private pensions or annuities
- 9.2 Government civilian employee pensions
- 9.3 Military employee’s pensions, including veteran’s payment

Alimony, child support
10.0 USDA regulations require that child support or alimony be considered as income to households receiving it, and not deducted from the income of the household paying it.

EXAMPLE:
Jim Pierce pays $250 a month in child support to Sherry Miller for their daughter Amy. If Sherry Miller applies for WIC, her income includes the $250 child support payment. If Jim Pierce applies for WIC for a child other than Amy, his income also includes the $250 he pays in child support. It is not deducted from his total income. Jim Pierce cannot count Amy as a member of his household unless she lives with him 50 percent or more of the time.

- 10.1 Child support may include any regular contributions from people not living in the household but that is made regularly enough that the applicant depends on it.

Student loans
11.0 The part of student loans or grants funded under Title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 is not considered income when calculating WIC income eligibility.

- 11.1 Attendance costs paid for by the student loan are not considered income. Attendance costs are defined as regular tuition and fees for students carrying at least a half-time workload as determined by the institution, plus an allowance for books, supplies, and transportation required by the course of study. Attendance costs do not include paying room (housing), board (food), or dependent care.

(Student loans) 11.2 Title IV student loan or grant amounts beyond attendance costs should be considered as income when figuring WIC program eligibility.

11.3 Title IV financial assistance includes: Pell Grants, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant (SEOG), College Work-Study, Perkins Loans, Stafford Loans, and PLUS Loans/Supplemental Loans for Students.

EXAMPLE: Julie Rose is getting a $5,000 PLUS Loan for attending college full time. Her tuition is $3,000, books $500, and transportation to and from school $500, for a total of $4,000. The portion of the loan counted as income in determining her eligibility for WIC is $1,000 ($5,000 - $4,000 attendance costs = $1,000 income).

Student aid 11.4 Any other type of student financial assistance provided directly to the individual is considered income.

Farms and self-employment 12.0 Net income is gross income minus business-related expenses, such as those deducted when filling out a 1040 tax form. The applicant’s most recent completed tax return can indicate net income, but because conditions in farming and self-employment may change rapidly, you should update that information with the applicant’s best estimate if s/he feels this year’s income will be significantly different.

The intent is to exclude business and farm expenses from income counted for WIC eligibility.

EXAMPLE: Sue Meers has started her own beauty shop, which generates $1,500 income a month. Sue estimates that the business-related expenses she will report on her 1040 will be about $500, for rent, supplies, and utilities. Sue’s net monthly income, for determining WIC eligibility, is $1,000 ($1,500 gross income - $500 business-related expense).

Payments made by the military 13.0 Follow the guidance below for payments made by the military.

Payments made by the military for housing 13.1 Any payment received directly by an applicant or participant employed by the military to cover on- or off-base housing is not counted as income when determining WIC eligibility in Oregon. Federal regulations give states the option to not include this kind of allowance as income, so some states count it and some do not. Oregon does not.

Payments made directly to a service man or woman and appearing on the employee’s Leave and Earnings Statement (LES) as Basic Allowance for Housing (BAH) or Basic Allowance for Quarters (BAQ) is not counted as income when determining WIC eligibility in Oregon.

EXAMPLE: The army pays Margaret Hoolihan $1,950 a month. This check includes $450 per month for housing because she lives off-base. This $450 appears in her pay check each month and is listed on the LES as BAH. The income used in determining Ms. Hoolihan’s WIC eligibility is $1,500 ($1,950 less $450 housing allowance).

13.2 Any combat pay received directly by an applicant or participant employed by the military while serving in an area that has been designated as a combat zone is not counted as income when determining WIC eligibility.

13.2.1 This only applies to combat pay that is received during the time the service member is deployed to a combat zone.

13.3 For service members receiving one time bonus or clothing allowances consider income averaging for the year.

14.0 Apply the following guidelines when determining how to treat lump sum payments for WIC income eligibility.

- 14.1 Do not count as income lump sum payments that represent reimbursements for lost or damaged property or payments for medical bills resulting from an accident or injury.
- 14.2 Count as income lump sum payments that represent new money intended for income such as gifts, inheritances, lottery winnings, workman’s compensation for lost income, and severance pay. In most cases, the lump sum should be counted as a part of the household’s annual income, or divided by twelve to estimate a monthly income.
- 14.3 If the lump sum payment does not clearly represent either reimbursement or new money, then ask the applicant to declare what portion of the payment is a reimbursement and what portion is new income. The portion that is declared as new money will be counted as income.

15.0 Refer to Appendix B for specific financial resources which are excluded from WIC household income calculations.

x. Payments received under the Housing and Community Development Act of 1987, unless the family’s income increases at any time higher than 50% of the median income of the area (see box below).

The “median income of the area” is determined by the Housing and Urban Development (HUD) agency. All recipients of payments under the Cranston- Gonzales National Affordable Housing Act and the Housing and Community Development Act of 1987 have incomes below 80% and 50% of the area, respectively. Therefore, these payments would not be counted as income for WIC eligibility purposes. Federal law requires that this information be stated in the WIC Program Manual.

y. Federal compensation to the following Native American groups: Warm Springs Tribe (Judgment Award Authorization Act funds up to $2,000 maximum per payment); Yakima Indian Nation (Indian Claims Commission Payment); Apache Tribe of the Mescalero Reservation (Indian Claims Commission Payment); Navajo and Hopi Tribe (relocation assistance); Blackfeet, Grosventre, and Assiniboin Tribes (Montana); Papago Tribe (a.k.a. Tohono O’odham Nation, Arizona); Chippewas: Mississippi, Michigan, Red Lake, Saginaw, Turtle Mountain; Sac and Fox Indian (claims agreement); Passamaquoddy Tribe and Penobscot Nation (Maine Indian Claims Settlement Act, 1980); and Ottawa Indians, Grand River Band. Payments received under the Judgment Award Authorization Act, or income from submarginal U.S. land held in trust for certain Indian tribes.

z. Short-term, non-secured loans to which the applicant does not have constant or unlimited access.
