Summary

Oregon voters recently passed Ballot Measure 119, requiring OLCC licensed processors, retailers, medical only processors, medical only retailers, research certificate holders and labs to provide the OLCC with a signed labor peace agreement (LPA) or attestation prior to licensure or renewal.

The new law went into effect December 5, 2024.

Any application for a license or renewal application or certificate in the categories listed above, received on or after December 5, 2024, will be required to include:

- A signed labor peace agreement entered into between the applicant and a bona fide labor organization actively engaged in representing or attempting to represent the applicant's employees; or
- An attestation signed by the applicant and the bona fide labor organization stating that the applicant and the bona fide labor organization have entered into and will abide by the terms of a labor peace agreement.

FAQs

I don't have a Labor Peace Agreement yet and my renewal is due. Is there anything I can do so my license doesn't expire, and I can continue to operate?

- A. Yes, even if you don't have a Labor Peace Agreement, you can submit your license renewal. If you submit a timely renewal application and payment of your renewal fees, you are still allowed to operate until a final decision is issued on your renewal. If you don't have a LPA at the time you submit your timely renewal application, submit a letter in place of your LPA explaining why you have not been able to obtain one.

The OLCC will continue to update this bulletin as we learn more about the new law. If you have any questions, please send them to marijuana.licensing@olcc.oregon.gov.
