Packaging Rule Change

- Effective as of August 23, 2016, an edible, topical, or tincture that contains less than 15 mg of THC in the entire container can be packaged in a single-serving child-resistant package.
 - The package must still be certified as child-resistant by a third-party testing firm.
- Also, effective as of August 23, 2016, all concentrates and extracts must be packaged in a re-sealable, continually child-resistant package.

Packaging Rule Change – Two Examples

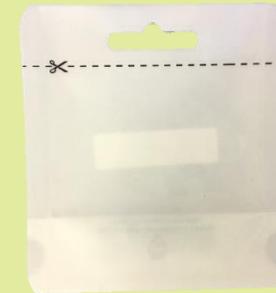

Three edibles with 5 mg
THC each (Total 15 mg)

Can be packaged in

Single-serving, child-resistant package

Four edibles with 5 mg
THC each (Total 20 mg)

Must be packaged in

Re-sealable, continually child-resistant package

Packages

- Physical container that holds the marijuana item – does not include any part of the label
- Can submit photos with the label on the package, but the package is what is important
- If package is child resistant, show the closing mechanism

What can go on the SAME APPLICATION

Different colors and flavors can go on same application

Additionally, for any strain, THC/CBD concentration, net weight, date or tracking number changes, you do not need to submit new labels.

Should I use my OHA Registrant Number or my OLCC License Number to apply?

OHA Registrant

- Before Package or Label Application will be approved, you must go through the OHA registration process and receive a valid Registrant number.
 - If you are an OHA processor, your package will be approved if initial review is complete

OLCC Licensee

- Before Package or Label Application will be approved, you must have an active OLCC license.
 - Can apply while license application is pending, but application status will say “Compliant, not approved for use” until license becomes active.
