3. Public Comment
 - a. None
4. Acknowledging unmarked graves document
 - a. No draft from Bev Power, Charlotte feels it could be helpful to provide information about the options, thinks to consider about the marking of unmarked graves, and cost items. Would like to include examples. Should it be one marker from the family, what would be most appropriate? When a group or individual. Oregon Nikkei could be a resource for the marking of the Japanese infants. Some cemeteries crosses to mark unmarked graves, 12x12 cement marker. Discuss draft at next meeting.
5. Criteria for grants to mark unmarked graves
 - a. Would like to see the reasons for the decisions? Some markers might be worthy of a larger contribution. If we set specific criteria, it would be hard to address specifically for individual cemeteries. Put a statement in the grant guidelines, about specific budget. No Specific criteria should be included in the next grant cycle.

6. Confederate flags in historic cemeteries discussion

- a. Symbols are important. Current political climate, the confederate flag is being used to intimate and threaten people. Question why people are putting flags on the graves. It hasn't come up in Charlotte's cemetery. She puts us ones on historic cemeteries. World making a statement or a policy draw it out? Point to be discussed, confederate flag on US memorial day is not the same as memorial day.
- b. Stan Clarke – Places flags on Powell grove cemetery, if there is a confederate with a marker that state they are, then they should have a confederate flag on the burial on US memorial day.
- c. Steve Sprenger – We are historic cemeteries, the civil war was part of our history, something to learn from, not be afraid of. Things we need to learn about. Need learn about it and understand it, and hopefully we will never do something that silly again. We need to take that into consideration into each one. Can this be applied to other conflicts and they shouldn't be included because of this. Every time we turn around the history books should be thicker and thicker. The people in the Shedd Cemetery have contributed to local history, have 48 veterans and the cemetery. We would like to include more history about each of the individuals. Officers and enlisted, etc.
- d. Charlotte – Comments about history, a lot of value judgements to Memorial Day. It does get into the variables of the conflicts. Two of three confederates married into union.
- e. Milo – Something he discussed in grad school, where these views or actions out of line at the time.
- f. Steve Sprenger – Has a black family buried in the cemetery. In the records, noted as a colored family.
- g. Discussion - commission position? Guidelines? Ask questions?
