

Benefits for Youth in the Community

Oregon Youth Authority

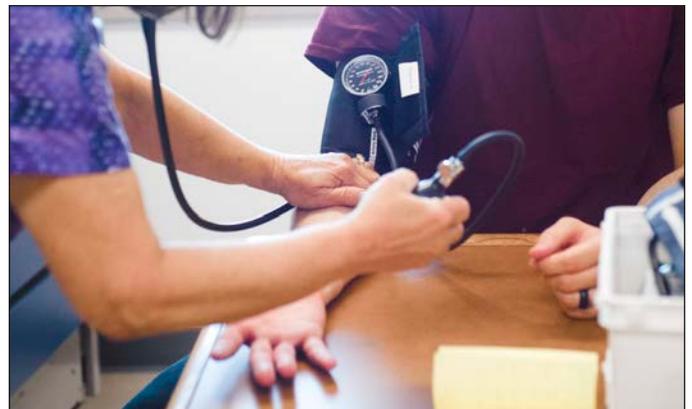

Helping Your Youth Get the Services They Need

The Oregon Youth Authority has a team of people who find benefits to help pay for services for youth. We call them our Youth Benefits Access Team, or YBAT.

While your youth is in our custody, OYA will make sure their needs are met, including treatment, foster care, residential placements, and other services as identified. These services are paid for by the state, but your child also may qualify for benefits that help support the costs of these programs.

We know this is a tough time for you and your family. Thinking about benefits can make things even harder. But we need your help.

We may ask for personal information about you, your child, and your family. This is to help us learn whether your child is eligible for benefits that help pay for services they need.

How Benefits Work

Medical Benefits

Do you already have private health insurance for your youth? If so, you should keep it, and let us know about it. It could help your youth get access to more care in the community.

If your youth is eligible for medical benefits through the Oregon Health Plan (OHP), we will help them set up an account. However, if your youth also is covered by private health insurance, that must be used before OHP.

Social Security

Oregon law says that if a youth is eligible to receive Social Security benefits, OYA must apply to get those benefits to help provide care for the youth. If your youth already was receiving any type of Social Security benefits, those payments will now come to OYA instead of to your family.

Your youth may qualify for Social Security if they have physical or mental disabilities, or if their parent died, retired, or is disabled. If we believe your youth is eligible for these benefits while they are in our custody, we will help them apply to receive them.
