What is Offer Versus Serve (OVS)?

Offer versus serve (OVS) is an optional style of meal service that allows participants to decline some of the food offered in a reimbursable breakfast, lunch, or supper.

When can OVS be used?

OVS is only allowed at breakfast, lunch, and supper. It is not allowed at snack since there is not enough food offered to allow a participant to decline some foods and still receive sufficient nutrition.

What's the benefit of OVS?

OVS can help At-Risk Afterschool Programs and Adult Day Care Centers save money by reducing food waste and costs while still maintaining the nutritional value of the meal that is served. It allows children and adults to have a choice in what they eat, which can increase satisfaction and enjoyment in their meal.

Useful Definitions

Food Component: a food category that makes up a reimbursable meal. Food components in CACFP include: grains, vegetables, fruits, meat/meat alternates, and milk.

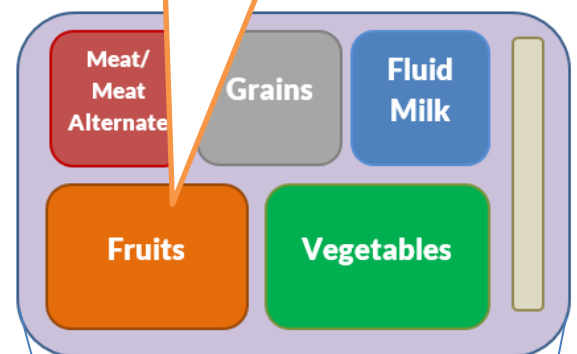

Food Item: A specific food within the food component. For example, an orange is a food item in the fruits component and bread is a food item in the grains component.

Combination Food: A food item that cannot be separated and contains two or more food components. For example, macaroni and cheese includes the meat alternate and grains components.

Example

An orange is a food item
