Framework for Plan Revision 9:20 Mariana Prashnik-Enriquez	Update provided on the partnership between R16CC and ODE that includes integration of students' success plans across and within all of the offices and teams throughout ODE, alignment of data collection efforts across student success plans, and framework development to help guide the revision and alignment of student success plans. Q: How do we know that what we put forward for our communities is going to be prioritized? A: We are looking at how we can do better at centering community voices. Your voices are what are going to develop strategies, goals, and objectives of the SSPs. The other layer is understanding the intersectionality of all of our plans and plan students. Comment: At the same time, we need to be mindful of each individual identity as well. Homogenizing risks erasure. We can't lose sight of where there are differences. A unified template doesn't make sense across the board. There are places where the plans lineup, but there are also unique considerations for each population. Comment: We came into existence in the first place to specifically target the underachievement of our Black students in the state. The "what" of the SSPs is identical; the "how" is what needs to be uniquely designed by and for each community. We, as an agency, don't have the expertise to design the hows. That is where the AGs come in. We will rely on your voice to help ODE determine how the strategies will be implemented. Mariana reviewed slides from the meeting slide deck that detailed the draft cross student success plan framework.
